Diane Keaton has featured in Justin Bieber's latest grief-stricken track 'Ghost'

Justin Bieber has churned out a deep emotional single 'Ghost' along with an official music video. It has been premiered today on 8th October and already making the fans go crazy. Everybody's favorite Hollywood star Diane Keaton has featured in the video as Justin's grandmother and made everybody emotional. A potential dose of tragedy and grief is present in the track as well as the music video that establishes the deep-rooted connection between a grandfather and grandson. The latest track, 'Ghost' appears in Justin Bieber's latest studio album 'Justice' along with 15 other chart-busting singles. Amaal Mallik is bringing sob hours to life with his latest one-sided love song 'Pyaar Ek Tarfaa'

Amaal Mallik is fleshing out deep emotions with his latest single 'Pyaar Ek Tarfaa', another eyejerker love song. The song is featured by the queen of Indian music Shreya Ghoshal. Armaan's brother has already impressed the audience with his music producing and composing skills and this time he is trying his hand at singing and acting. Lyricist Manoj Muntashir has penned down the magical words and helped to craft this masterpiece. The song has a sweet melodic texture along which is well complemented by Amaal and Shreya Ghoshal's ethereal vocal skills. Not only musically but the track is piquing everyone's interest with its visual representation. Big Boss 14 contestant Jasmin Bhasin has featured in the video as the female lead character. Jasmin and Amaal have done a great job in making this music video into a cinematic piece of pleasure. Though there is much poignancy in the track, the hook makes everyone hum the track while rejuvenating lovelorn memories.

The official music video starts with a sweet romantic scene where Jasmin plays with Amaal's hair on a hilly location. She makes the gesture to ask why he looks upset and in the flashback, the audience can see where it all started from. While thinking of the sorrowful events of life, the artist rejuvenates the one-sided love with deep and intriguing lamentation. The incomplete feeling of love made him fall into despair. Manoj Muntashir is well known for his patriotic songs, this time he made justice with love. While some of the netizens were digging trolls out of Manoj's 'inspired' songs, the lyricist share post on Twitter, saying in Hindi, "You had a complaint with the recreations. This is the original. Now it is to be seen whether you listen to the original also with the same passion as you listen to the recreations. #PyaarEkTarfa Hands over to you, hope you will give it 'all-round love'!" However, the promotional works and sharing anecdotes have been done successfully as Jasmin, Amaal and Shreya have thanked the listeners for showing much love.

The music video has been released under the label of Sony Music India which premiered on 6th October. It has already garnered more than 13 million views within two days. The track 'Pyaar Ek Tarfaa' depicts the picture of a one-sided love story but it has earned love from all.

UPCOMING MUSIC ARTIST JAHI ISRAEL'S NEW TRACK 'OPPRESSION' OPENS A NEW PERSPECTIVE OF LIFE'S UNDERSTANDING

Upcoming Music Artist Jahi Israel's New Track 'Oppression' Opens a New Perspective of Life's Understanding Jahi Israel is presenting a stream of meandering consciousness through the verses of reggae. He recently came out with the track, 'Oppression' that explores the different variants of life such as social, cultural, spiritual, and intrapersonal perspectives. Through his music, he wants to reach out to the audience and led them into his melodic and responsive music.

Q. Which old-school, as well as contemporary music artists, influences your work the most?

ANS: Growing up in a rock&roll area I loved Jimi

Hendrix, then the Beatles, who changed everything, an Led Zeppelin an the Who. Even followed the Grateful Dead for a little bit. But once a heard concious Rasta music I was hooked. Bob Marley and Peter Tosh blew me away. Lately it's men like Sizzla, an Capleton an Luciano.

Q. You sound like someone who is beyond materialistic pleasures. Do you think life can run its course without worldly desires?

ANS: Life IS going to run its course. The question is, how much are we going to let are worldly desires ruin it for us. The Almighty has already given us everything we need to live and set a path before us. Worldly desires just distract us an keep us away from where we're supposed to go. Everybody feels these things and it can be very difficult thinking about tomorrow, when you need something now. But you have to be honest with yourself and have your priorities straight. Remember only the Almighty is perfect. But get your priorities straight.

Q. Your musical style is very personalized and imbibes numerous musical and thematic components resonating with a global sound. What do you think about the audience reception of such an undefined soundscape in the mainstream music industry?

ANS: I'm curious to find out. All my hope an trust is in the Almighty. He has given me this mind an put these songs in my head. I can only sing them as they are.

Q. Your inclination towards spirituality is evident. What compelled you to move from the conventional American life to leading a Rastafari lifestyle?

ANS: The conventional American Life led me to drugs and alcoholism, while witnessing the racism and feeling trapped in a second class life. Making I want to experience a place where everyone was basically the same. So I ventured to Jamaica. It is there I met Rastafarians. They opened my eyes to a different way be to be in touch with the creator. In America Christianity is looked on as dumb and corny but always something I wanted to explore. And it all came full circle when they reasoned about black people being the first people on Earth.and the true children of Israel. Leading up to the Emperor Haile Selassie1, fulfilling all the prophecy's of Christ second coming. At first I would just say Haile Selassie1 was just a great man, Emperor of Ethiopia and so on. But after being around Rastfarians, and studying His Imperial Majesty's life and words it is obvious to see he was no ordinary man. And then continuing to study His Majesty and praying and feeling a stronger and stronger connection to the Almighty, with to fully coming to the conclusion of the Divinity of Haile Selassie1. Jah Rastafari!. So it is a lifestyle that wants to be one with the Earth and as natural as possible. Which will lead to a stronger connection to the Creator. But to us it's everything. As you get closer to the Almighty your life WILL get better which will lead you to express your gratitude more and more, with words coming from your heart. That's the inspiration that powered men like Bob Marley and Peter Tosh and all true Rastamen. And of course speaking for the disenfranchised and powerless. As the late John Lewis said "if you see something wrong, you have to say something about it."

Q. Do you make music for yourself or your audience? Or are you aiming at helping your audiences open their eyes to the greater meaning of life as you did?

ANS: In my opinion if you have the ability to speak to numerous people you should be saying something to help people. When you find the Almighty all He asks us to do is spread His message. I feel His message, and see the injustices going on in the world, and feel the need to say something about it. Music is my vehicle. To me the most important thing is getting the message out. To help people see the truth, and hopefully encourage further conversation.

Q. Do you plan on exploring more areas of your creative abilities and set up a soundscape with more music and songs in the future?

ANS: As far as the future goes, I have been writing for many years and have many messages to get out now. But I truly give thanks to be able to still observe and come up with new thoughts everyday. And while I can, I'd like to get to as many areas as I can.

Q. Although Bob Marley has set his image and significance in the backdrop of socio-cultural acceptance, many taboos are prevalent in the glamorous industry. Do you think it is a cultural influx, or people are blinded by materialistic virtues and hence, the wrong perspective?

ANS: Yes people are blinded by materialistic virtues and hence have the wrong perspective. If you have not grown up in an environment of high spirituality it is very easy to be attracted material things we can hold in our hand. When our experience in this world grows we learn that spiritual world IS more important than the material world. And until we change our value system, we will continue to see starving people and homeless people, sex trafficking, and drugs and war.

Q. Do you give your music any identity apart from just being a reggae soundscape?

ANS: The identity I would give my music is conscious, spirituality with a little prophecy. Although I don't really deal with labels.

Q. How do you sustain your own conscience on a regular basis given the detrimental condition of the world with news and de-motivating stories constantly being fed to us by the media?

ANS: It's just total faith in the Almighty. He tells us to fear him and NOTHING else. He has already shared with us His divine Grace, and Mercy by creating us, so it is easy to follow his word. And we see the world falling further and further away from the Creator so the detrimental events will continue.

Q. Lyrics are the backbone of the kind of music you make. So, are you a poet?

ANS: I never really called myself a poet. Just trying to put stuff out there that would make the world a better place to live.

Q. Any words of wisdom for upcoming artists, the strugglers, and the people staggered in the plight of life?

ANS. So to upcoming artists or anyone struggling, it's just about putting the Almighty first. Getting on the path He has set before us. Why should He help you if your not doing anything with the path He has given you. And it's also about getting your priorities straight. Doing the things that will help you reach your goal. And not doing the things that will only delay you. How much do you REALLY want it?!

Take a Listen to the Most Creative and Diverse Albums of 2021 So Far

This year so far has been a whirlwind of new releases with some of the best breakthrough debuts changing the scope of the industry altogether. Pop and indie-rock were some of the most prevalent genres with artists putting their best foot forward in redefining music and art in their own individual ways. The following lists some of the best projects that have elevated the collective industry to a new degree of creative accomplishment.

Sour, Olivia Rodrigo:

Olivia Rodrigo is probably the biggest breakthrough artist to have come out this year and her debut album, 'Sour' speaks an immersive saga of musical expertise and potential. 'Drivers License' went on to become the humming tune for everyone, a captivating pop ballad that tackles the known territories of heartbreak. She shows empathy and sincerity in this breakup that stands as an inspiration for the young teens going through the same ordeal. The album only sets her pace which is set to grow and evolve into something mature in the days to come. Riding the wave of emotional carnage of the teenage, she emerges victorious and ready to take on the world.

Nine, Sault:

They are a British collective who are termed as the mysterious contributors of angular R&B with a social and cultural message coating their immersive soundscape. 'Nine', their latest release strips down. The group announced that the album will be available only for 99 days on streaming platforms and then receded like an unstable meandering flow. There is dance, lyrics, themes, magic, and an internal bliss with this record that never leaves. There is no deliberate creation of an image as all artists sway into this unanimous decision of making free music and not thinking of the economic exuberance.

Mood Valiant, Hiatus Kaiyote:

This music group from Australia and their soul-inspired sound has been sampled by some of the big shorts of the industry like Beyonce and Jay-Z in the past 5 years. However, following their 2015 critical breakthrough with Choose Your Weapon, the band chose to deliver detailed musical imagery with their third studio album, Mood Valiant. They do not streamline nor do they follow benchmarks and standardizations, they are here to strip it all, categorically, culturally, artistically, and above all, musically. The psychedelic interplay alongside vocalist Nai Palm's sailing vocal prowess and melodic weaves makes for an undeniable accomplishment for the band and for music as a whole.

Collapsed in Sunbeams, Arlo Parks:

If you want to experience the sublimity of an R&B infusion in alt-rock, this is your cup of tea for sure. At just 20-years-old, Arlo Parks is going places combining cultural roots and applying the same magic in her music. Her refreshing take on soul and also pop in certain areas all point towards a new breakthrough artist to emerge in 2021.

Call Me If You Get Lost, Tyler, the Creator:

Controversy's favorite child, Tyler, the Creator has shown his dynamic and prolific artistic side through the verses of his new record, Call Me If You Get Lost. He has a vision that is not just constricted to his soundscape but also peaks in his music videos. This album is being called his most cohesive performance as he steps up from his last album, Igor which surprisingly won a Grammy for Best Rap Album.

Inside (The Songs), Bo Burnham:

This album can be called the collective outcry of every individual trapped in their homes during the pandemic trying to balance socio-cultural as well as intrapersonal devastations.

The album comprises of songs and lyrical constructs that go through one's mind within a home while the outside shapes into nothing short of an atrocious monster in disguise. The songs hold a comic relief and send out imageries of observations made of people around us. Joking about death's artistic futility and all that comparable to a life that we live currently, this project will remain as a flagbearer of sarcastic realizations. Some of the songs worth a mention include 'White Woman's Instagram', 'Bezos I', 'Sexting', and 'Unpaid Intern'.

Daddy's Home, St. Vincent:

St. Vincent defines home as a relative confluence of sentiments. Exploring different 70's influences and tracing her soundscape back to when the light burned bright; she brings back summertime elusiveness for her audiences. Those who have listened to her music before will find this one more mellowed down, less agitated, and more practical. She has worked with producer Jack Antonoff this time to pave the way for a soundscape of the complementary past, present, and future. She also explores personal areas such as his father's release from prison in one of the songs.

If I Could Make It Go Quiet, Girl In Red:

This record is not for the faint-hearted, literally! Marie Ulven is a Norwegian artist exploring the scopes of bedroom-pop. However, in this album, she dips deep into the humane concepts of anxiety, loneliness, rage, lust, jealousy, and agony of love. She already has a wide spreadsheet of fans following her 2018 release, 'I Wanna Be Your Girlfriend'. Through the debut album, she exposes herself but gets to the point concerning creative pronouncement.

Sound Ancestors, Madlib:

Madlib is one of the most inventive rappers out there who has finally released his much-awaited proper debut album, Sound Ancestors. This album came into being after 30 years of being in the industry. The sonic exploration in the album is in collaboration with electronic artist Four Tet. The album is a resonating stream of hundreds of recorded fragments within a dense scope of overwhelming virtues. The two artists put in their complementary ideas in producing one of the most appreciated albums of this year. Get ready to indulge in a sublime and natural progression of musical ecstasy.

Outside Child, Allison Russell:

This album may be called the best memoir record of this year. Melody, emotions, social influences, and subliminal beauty all comprise the territories of the album. Attributed as "A concept album about childhood sexual abuse and recovery", the songs offer beautiful craftsmanship in their production exposing the audience to the idea and realism of life in a deep and personal way. There also comes a sense of gratification with the album as Russell makes her way through the complexities of the themes and the production to provide a lulling membrane in the end. Harrowing but joyful, this album, all in all, feels like a hug of unadulterated empathy.

Having covered most of 2021, it is safe to say that the music ruling this year's charts are out of the box and retain a sense of individuality in them. Take your pick from the above list and make yourself comfortable as well uncomfortable with the artists' creative expressions which are sometimes mellow, sometimes comic, but mostly, an exploration into new perspectives.

This weekend, 'Saturday Night Live' will be featured by Kacey as she performs for the latest single 'Justified'. The single is appearing on her latest album 'Star-Crossed' that has been just released. During the set, the artist performed only wearing a pair of cowboy boots representing her unwavering personality and singing skills. The boot was calf-high along with intricate stitches on it and pointy toes. Some of the fans are comparing the performance with the nude guitar-strumming scene from the Oscar-winning film in 1994. Talking about inspiration, the artist wrote Twitter that Robin Wright's Jenny was the inspiration.

The show went on and Musgraves made some additional outfit changes brightening up Saturday Night. The season 47 premiere was hosted by actor Owen Wilson.

The Grammy Award-Winning singer wore a leather Corset later on along with a pair of matching trousers and a golden necklace. As the episode proceeds, she changes herself in a cropped brown flannel shirt and blue jeans outfit to perform the track 'Camera Roll'. The 'Rainbow' singer has first made her SNL debut back in 2018 and impressed listeners with her honey-dripping country singing on her album 'Golden Shower'. Now, she is taking the show to a completely new level with her appearance, opening her soul to all.

Check out her full performance on YouTube and SNL to get a better look and musical experience.

But when it comes to slaying, you better put your boots on as Kacey does! In recent months, celebrities like Kendall Jenner, Sophie Turner, Lil Nas, and many others are embracing Wild West and worn cowboy boots.

Lana Del Rey's alternative video of new single 'Arcadia' catches the attention of the world

American singer-songwriter Lana Del Rey has dropped an alternative version of the original music video of her last month's release, 'Arcadia' from her upcoming eighth studio album, 'Blue Banisters'. In the new music video, she is seen swinging in her backyard. The album is set to release on October 22nd, 2021 as CDs, cassettes, and in some exclusive vinyl formats. It will have a total of 15 amazing tracks. The music video is produced by Drew Erickson and it will be a part of the album, 'Blue Banisters' along with the previously released singles, 'Text Book' and 'Wildflower Wildfire' in May this year. Vonda-famed Mike Dean had also been given the credit of a producer to the follow-up of her last album, 'Chemtrails Over the Country Club'. Both the songs were written by the artist herself in Los Angeles.

Before the record is set to release, the singer had deactivated her social media accounts. She told her fans about the decision that she has many other interests and newer things to do, which needs full privacy and transparency. She further said that she is currently working on her records, short poetry books, spoken word albums, and more.

She describes her upcoming album as a collection of some older and newer songs. Some of the songs are written by her family members and friends. And most of them are written by previous collaborators.

Lana Del Rey shared the original video of the track, 'Arcadia' last month. On October 7th, she has dropped an alternative version of the music video on major streaming sites. Del Rey has revealed that she has put a condition in her will, which prohibits others to release her posthumous music after her death.

Similar demands have been made recently by artist Anderson. Pakk. He shared his new tattoo that asks others to not release his posthumous albums and songs after his death with his name attached. The tattoos also reveal that those songs were just his inner demon and they were never meant to be released.

Country Musician Travis Tritt Cancels Gigs and Shows Maintaining COVID-19 Safety Protocols Stirring Controversy

Travis Tritt has sparked controversy yet again after canceling four concerts across venues imposing mandatory COVID-19 protocols. The musician announced that he will extract from performing at the venues in Indiana, Mississippi, Illinois, and Kentucky. All venues across these aforementioned states are imposing safe protocols and restrictions including wearing masks, negative Covid-19 test results, or proof of vaccination for concertgoers. Tritt told Billboard about this social misjudgment that he is “not against the vaccine” but “against forcing people to take medicine that they may not need and may not want.” He further added, “I totally disagree with any mandate that would force people to go against their better judgment or would attack their personal freedoms. That’s why I am making this stand. And I know, straight up, it’s definitely gonna cost me money and that’s a sacrifice I’m willing to make.” He also made controversy in August when he came out with a statement saying that that he strongly believes that these safety protocols and restrictions are ‘discriminating’ to all concertgoers. Tritt who is 58-years-old also shared that he still plans to perform at venues without guidelines. He made his concerns clear after a few fans reached out to him saying that they were turned away from buildings because they were not vaccinated or were unable to provide a negative test report. He expressed his views about the issue on Tuesday to Fox News host Tucker Carlson saying he was “putting my money where my mouth is” by refusing to perform and then canceling his concerts at venues that require safety measures for all attendees. With this, he becomes the latest celebrity to speak out against vaccination or masking rules. He also told Carlson, “This is trying to divide people. This is trying to shame people. This is trying to basically discriminate against people they don’t feel are clean enough to be a part of enjoying a concert like that. This is not the first time that the country music star stirred social controversy. A two-time Grammy winner in the 90s, he has been blocking many on Twitter who supports the Black Lives Matter movement and oppose former President Donald Trump, in an effort, he said, to slow down anti-conservative sentiment on the platform. On Monday, he further fueled the issue by saying on his website, “pushing Covid testing protocols on my fans will not be tolerated.” With all that has been going on in the world, his words boil down to sentiments over global safety the judge of which is the common man itself who will decide their future and life in due course.

KATY PERRY LOOKS INCREDIBLE IN HER LAQUAN SMITH ORANGE LATEX OUTFIT AT AMERICAN IDOL SEASON 20

American pop diva Katy Perry left her fans in awe by sharing several photos of her sporting a stunning orange bustier and skirt on her Instagram. play". Fans are going gaga over her look and flooding her comment section with praise. While someone said she looked like a whole goddess, another said she looked hot. Another fan said she is so stunning.

Perry loves wearing latex pieces and had always been able to rock the look at whatever the occasion is. She wore a red latex wrap dress with black latex high heels on one of the episodes of American Idol back in May. In another episode of the show in April, she wore a light blue latex dress. Former judge Paula Abdul returned to the show on that episode. The fans were able to hear the sound of the dress when she posted a video of her before the show wearing the dress on her Instagram. When she moved around the familiar sound of latex could be heard and she explained that the sound was not her farts. She would not do it on live television. It was the sound of her dress.

Apart from the 20th anniversary new of the American Idol, the internationally-famed musician shared some exciting news of her own. Previously it was revealed that Perry, Carrie Underwood, Luke Bryan, and Celine Dion would start Las Vegas residencies in 2021. Perry will begin in December. She could not hold back her excitement in an interview with Variety for their 2021 issue called 'Power of Women'.

She explained it as larger than life and a lot bigger than Super Bowl. She said it will be an accumulation of everything. She said that it is the weirdest thing she had ever done. It's like dark humor, a little wrong but in a good way.

Last night Kentish Town Forum in London has taken a huge turn as Digga D was featured on the stage with his unwavering performance. The rapper has already faced many legal restrictions while recording and now it has come on the stage. As Half nine comes around, the forum stage has already turned into a chaotic pressure cooker. The stage was completely covered with a black curtain for more than half an hour while the final touches are taken behind the curtain. As the torch-lit preparation was going behind, the curtain gradually rose and revealed a chaotic scene.

The title of Digga D's Made in the Pyrex mixtape could be seen along with a humongous measuring jug. On top of it, DJ Bempah was sitting and grooving with music, while the crowd goes crazy. There were a lot of teenagers in the crowd who exploded with netizens' virtues scream and Snapchat. The energy in the room quickly spiked and remained untamed until Digga D makes a departure from the stage. It was roughly a one-hour performance that created such resonance.

The show was meant to be this London drill rapper Digga D's debut headline performance. His tour dates for UK and Ireland have already been sold out and now it is making years. With a stain of prison and multiple restrictions, Digga was restricted to where, how, and why he can write.

This has created a critical trajectory on his musical journey which while he is capable of making gold records and chartbuster bangers. While his supply for resources has reduced exponentially, it created a demand among the listeners. Digga's show is the greatest example of that demand which has sprawled off through the chaos and energy among the crowd.

On the stage, Digga sets fire with his indomitable presence along with a planned light arrangement excitable 15-strong posse. The members of his CGM crew were quite supportive and enhanced his performance even more. Digga has already won the hearts of millions with his exquisite bangers like 'No Diet' and 'Bluuwuu'; perfect examples of his eclectic rapping style.

AJ Tracey joins the force and the pair captivates the audience with their power-packed performance of 'Bringing It Back'.

Their united stage presence has enriched the whole show's ambiance. Many of the fans shared their mixed feelings while witnessing their first show by Digga. However, the talented rapper decided not to utter more words than his indulgent lyrical approach. Before he left the stage, the artist simply said, "I love you lot. I'm out."

The No Bounds festival at Sheffield, England has just ended and captured the true beauty of glomming nostalgia that was prominent in the show. The event took place from October 15th to 17th this year across a number of venues at Sheffield. The industrial history of the city is well showcased as the festival took place in a former First World War gun barrel factory on the outskirts of the city called Hope Works nightclub and Kelham Island Museum. The booming techno sound presented by Helena Hauff at 4 am on Sunday makes you feel the concrete flakes coming off the surrounding walls. The intensity of the music penetrates the hearts and minds of the listeners. The range of the festival was quite broader this year. The shows were held in bus stations, DIY sites, and bars. Experimental electronic musician Mark Fell gave out an extraordinary performance at one of these venues. Maltby Miners Welfare Band gave out a three-hour-long performance throughout the hub featuring booming brass instrumentation that echoed through the ghostly ambiance. The performance was filled with boundless emotional pang making it highly melancholy.

Most of the performance at No Bounds was held in the darkness rather than the bright lights of a bus station. The collaboration of Ross Orton and the frontman of Working Men's Club, Sydney Minsky-Sargeant Gave out one of their best performance on Friday evening at Hope Works, offering a minimalistic and squelchy resonance. Loraine James, Kode9, and RP Boo were featured by the Hyperdub label offering the audience a unique and unpredictable melody that changed its flow from hip hop to the jungle, dynamic techno, and fractured beats. The festival-goers had a wonderful experience with their performance.

On Saturday, Space Afrika rocked the festival with a mesmerizingly dark ambiance and subtle resonance. Aurora Halal gifts the audience a slow-build-release DJing with a subtle pause to let the audience feel the dexterity of the performance.

The hard-hitting techno beats of Batu drive the listeners to lose control and enjoy the true essence of the show.

The venue for the No Bounds festival looks like the Berlin Wall made out of a giant concrete block. The feeling of inside that venue in the industrial Sheffield helps the audience get absorbed by the musical performances.

The 12-foot high walls with barbed wire make the audience remember the recently diseased English artist Richard Harold Kirk. He has helped rebuild the dying music industry of the city more than 40 years ago. He transformed an old cutlery works into an amazing music studio that produced one of the greatest music ever.

The No Bounds festival is brilliantly carrying out the tradition with so much success.

Italian Rock band Måneskin Releases an Intriguing Music Video for Their Track 'MAMMAMIA'

Italian rockers Måneskin recently dropped the video for their newest single, 'MAMMAMIA'. The 2021 winners of Eurovision are back with their follow-up track after the much appreciated 'I Wanna be Your Slave' rendition featuring Iggy Pop in August. In a press conference at Berlin's SO36 Club, the frontman of the band, Damiano David revealed that the song was written shortly after their win earlier in 2021.

He said, "We only had a few days to go to the studio and write new music," he explains, "but fortunately this song came out in a few hours – that's why we felt like it was going to be a banger for us." The band teased the audience for several weeks before officially releasing 'MAMMAMIA'. The premise of the storyline is also very interesting. Members of the band, Victoria De Angelis, Thomas Raggi, and Ethan Torchio all are on a fantasy trip of killing the frontman Damiano David mainly because he is annoying to them. The video is very much on par with the upcoming Halloween celebrations where David is seen killed in three different ways by three other members.

Direction for the video is undertaken by Spanish film director Rei Nadal. She has had extensive experience in directing fashion films for brands such as Burberry, Nike x OFF-WHITE. She has also directed music videos for Hercules and Love Affair, Mikky Ekko, and Primal Scream.

The music video for 'MAMMAMIA' that lasts three odd minutes is a burst of libido in contemporary lingo. The song is bejeweled with rhythmic patterns and strums. Damiano provides an extra edge of sharpness with his smoky and sultry voice.

The band was initially formed in Rome in 2016. They performed in the streets before catching everyone's eye in the 11th season of X Factor in 2017. They received an international breakthrough following the Eurovision win for Italy where they performed the song 'Zitti e bouni'.

To date, they have released two studio albums, nine singles, and one EP. They have already garnered international stardom and currently moving up their creative hype for more extraordinary contributions to the world of music. Check out their new song on YouTube to experience hard rock and glam rock once again.

Musicians DJ Snake, Ozuna, Megan Thee Stallion, and BLACKPINK's Lisa Team Up for New Track 'SG'

One of the most anticipated track releases of this year is here. DJ Snake recently came out with the track 'SG' in a long-awaited collaboration with artists Ozuna, Megan Thee Stallion, and BLACKPINK's Lisa.

The song was released only after a month of Ozuna announcing the same during an appearance at the 2021 MTV Video Music Awards that took place in September. The collaboration was also previously hinted at by DJ Snake himself back in May when he claimed to work with Lisa on a new song in a series of tweets which he later deleted. 'SG' is the acronym for Sexy Girl. The single dropped alongside an immersive music video created by director Colin Tilley. He has experience working with other artists as well include the song 'Stay' by The Kid LAROI and Justin Bieber. However, he is most renowned for his work in the music video 'WAP' by Cardi B and Megan Thee Stallion.

Megan, on the other hand, also announced her upcoming project 'Something For Thee Hotties: From Thee Archives'. It is a collection of freestyle and unreleased, archival tracks set to drop on October 29. She took to Instagram to say, "Freestyles y'all been asking for plus a few unreleased songs from my archives to hold y'all over for the rest of the year."

Lisa also debuted her single album called 'Lalisa'. The title track and its music video by the same name became the most-viewed YouTube music video in 24 hours by a solo artist. The record was previously held for two years by Taylor Swift's 2019 single, 'ME!'.

'Lalisa' is now the sixth most-viewed YouTube music video in the first 24 hours of all time. She is only surpassed by BTS's songs 'Butter', 'Dynamite', and 'Boy With Luv' alongside two other music videos by BLACKPINK itself: 'How You Like That' and 'Ice Cream' in collaboration with Selena Gomez.

Megan is also flourishing in the food business. She recently announced her expansion in the fried chicken industry where she launched a deal with Popeyes to release a branded hot sauce and merchandise line. In a press release, Popeyes America's president Sami Siddiqui said he "look[s] forward to working closely" with the singer "over many years as she begins her journey as a restaurateur".

Renowned hip hop artist Young Thug offers a wide range of melodies and vocal performance in his star cast new album, 'Punk' featuring 20 exceptional soundtracks.

One of the greatest hip hop artists in the contemporary hip hop industry, Young Thug is back with his second studio album, 'Punk' released on October 15th this year. After his first release, 'Slime Language 2' the brilliant artist dropped the new album with 300 Entertainment and Young Stoner Life Records. The 20-track album opens with the soothing and thought-provoking lyrical number, 'Die Slow', which was recorded in a hotel room in Venice two years ago. The track presents an oscillation between his pride and shame. He describes how he missed his son's birthday due to one of his tours. The track also depicts his brother almost getting the life sentence and his mother nearly dying. There is also a monologue about his parents' split, hit-and-run, and a shooting. His emotional state can be felt through every line of the monologue. The idiosyncratic nature of the lyrics has surprised the audience as this side of the artist is seen hardly ever.

AMERICAN ARTIST YOUNG THUG'S SECOND ALBUM 'PUNK' IS A JOURNEY INTO THE VIBRANT FLAVORS OF DIFFERENT RESONANCE

By Daily Music Roll

Though he tries to talk about the bad experiences in a comical way, his pain is prominent in his voice. The album features many heavyweights like Doja Cat, A$AP Rocky, Post Malone, Drake, J. Cole, Travis Scott, Gunna, Nate Ruess, Future, and many more. Juice WRLD and Mac Miller will be making guest appearances on the project.

Young Thug has given one of his best vocal performances in the album. He always tries to bring new elements to his soundscape and create new paths for the genre of hip hop. That is exactly what he did with the new album, 'Punk'.

The album is all about breaking the conventional norms of hip hop music and introducing new and exciting elements into its resonance. The album is slick and confident with reverberated guitar riffs giving the tracks a powerful touch of rock.

The trap number, 'Bubbly' with Drake and Travis Scott is quite different than the rest. He tried to bring back the appeal of his earlier hit, 'So Much Fun' introducing unique and surreal beats. In every song he fits himself according to their flow, offering the listeners a fresh new perspective every time.

The range of the tracks in the album is quite impressive. He plays the role of a successful rapper, lover, aspiring artist, family man, and more effortlessly. The songwriting is quite flexible, catering to every mood of the audience. The album is available on all major streaming platforms.

HARMONIUM - THE INDIAN HERITAGE OF MUSIC

Harmonium is one of the integral parts of Indian Music, especially classical music to some extent modern music too. This reed instrument has not enriched the culture of Indian music but also plays a vital role in the evolution of the world music industry. The instrument is capable of creating up to 12 surs and 22 shrutis that show its vast range. In this instrument, the keys which are played are continuously compressed by the bellows top to create a significant note, tone, and pitch. It is mainly made with wood, metal, brass, and cloth to craft a melodic tonal quality.

Origin

Though harmonium is originated in West Bengal, the instrument was first designed in the 1700s by Christian Gottlieb Kratzenstein. He was a professor of physiology at the University of Copenhagen.

This first design was way more compact like a small-sized organ along with a foot paddle below. The paddle is used to work as a pump that allows wind to pass through the chamber which is a pressure-equalizing air reservoir. As a result, the wind creates a vibration in the metal reeds to create a melody. The volume of sound was regulated by several valves and knobs which were placed on the top. It helped to bypass the air through the chamber and create different resonance to craft dynamic compositions. The Europeans introduced the instrument in America and its usage slowly spread in the colonies. However, the instrument lost its aura with the constant flux of change in the American music industry. The instrument was revamped and regained its aura in India with help of Dwarkanath Ghose. Mr. Ghoshe created a hand-pump version of harmonium in Calcutta and it began to enrich the classic music again. The foot-operated paddle was replaced by a hand-operated bellow in the rear of the tool. The drone knobs were added to churn out a more harmonic sound which can be manipulated with a scale-changing method. This version of the instrument was a modernized form that is less complex in nature, inexpensive, and way easier to maintain and repair. As a result, India became the leading harmonium manufacturing company in the world by 1915.

Influence

Harmonium is deeply connected with the traditional gharanas of Indian music. It is being widely used in the classical, Sufi, folk, ghazal, and many other genres for its harmonically rich tones. It is also being widely used in Marathi and Parsi stage music as well as local musical darbars. Even the religious songs in Gurudwaras and temples started using it due to its compatibility with loud audible music, perfect for group singing like bhajans.

While some call it ‘vaja’ or ‘peti’, harmonium started spreading its musical aura everywhere within and beyond India. Other Asian countries such as Pakistan, Afghanistan, and Bangladesh also enriched their Sufi, Qawwali music with the help of harmonium. Some of the greatest harmonium players like R.K. Bijapore, Krishna Das, Tulsidas Borkar, and many others have proven the paramount importance of this musical instrument. Throughout the history of Indian classical music, Harmonium has always stayed at the top of musicians’ preference and it is still proving its relevance.

Sir Elton John is All Set to Release His New Collaboration Album 'The Lockdown Sessions'

Sir Elton John announced the upcoming release of his album, 'The Lockdown Sessions' which is set to hit the stands on October 22. It is going to be a series in collaboration with a diverse stream of artists from different backgrounds.

The collaboration artists featuring in the album include Miley Cyrus, Dua Lipa, Eddie Vedder, Charlie Puth, Lil Nas X, Stevie Wonder, Gorillaz, Young Thug, Stevie Nicks, and Nicki Minaj. These include some of the musicians that he met during the Rocket Hour music show held by Apple music. The musicians have been working together on the upcoming LP for the last 18 months spanning the pandemic.

The lead single of the album is called 'Cold Heart (PNAU Remix)' featuring artist Dua Lipa. The song has already been released giving the audience a peek into what to expect. The track is a creative combination of some of Elton John's most famous tracks, 'Sacrifice' from 1989, 'Rocket Man' from 1972, 'Where's The Shoorah?' from 1976, and 'Kiss The Bride' from 1983.

In a statement, Elton John said, "The last thing I expected to do during lockdown was make an album. But, as the pandemic went on, one-off projects kept cropping up. Some of the recording sessions had to be done remotely, via Zoom, which I'd obviously never done before. Some of the sessions were recorded under very stringent safety regulations: working with another artist, but separated by glass screens."

He continued to say, "But all the tracks I worked on were really interesting and diverse, stuff that was completely different to anything I'm known for, stuff that took me out of my comfort zone into completely new territory. And I realized there was something weirdly familiar about working like this. At the start of my career, in the late 60s, I worked as a session musician."

Working with different artists during lockdown reminded me of that. I'd come full circle: I was a session musician again. And it was still a blast."

Elton John was during his Farewell Yellow Brick Road tour when the pandemic was announced. The new album is highly anticipated by the audience. Watch out for its release on October 22.
