Singer and Fashion Icon Rihanna and Rapper A$AP Rocky are Expecting their First Child

Famous singer Rihanna is expecting her first baby with rapper A$AP Rocky.

Donning a long pink jacket, Rihanna revealed her baby bump when the couple was photographed out in New York City last weekend. The jacket, unbuttoned at the bottom, revealed her growing bump in a gold cross with colorful jewels.

The series of photos included a sweet one in which A$AP Rocky kisses Rihanna on her forehead as they enjoyed a snowy walk outdoors.

A$AP told GQ about his romance with Rihanna back in May, calling her the "love of my life". He stated that being in a relationship with Rihanna felt like "so much better. So much better, when you got 'the one'. She amounts to probably, like, a million of the other ones. I think when you know, you know. She's the One".

A$AP Rocky further stated that starting a family is 'in my destiny, absolutely'. He continued "I think I'd be an incredible, remarkably overall amazing dad. I would have a very fly child. Very." Back in November 2020, a source confirmed PEOPLE that Rihanna and Rocky were dating each other after years of friendship. After Rihanna split from her boyfriend Hassan, the couple sparked romance rumors. The following year saw Rihanna and A$AP Rocky collaborating for the Fenty Skin campaign and giving several interviews together.

Rihanna hinted about her planning back in March 2020, when she told British Vogue that she was 'realizing life is really short' and was willing to find a new no-nonsense approach to living.

She said, "You don't have a lot of time to tolerate s----, you know? You put so much on your plate. When you are overwhelmed, you need to start cutting things out. And I am overwhelmed too much, what's happening now is that I'm going back to black and white. My gray area is shutting down."She continued "I know I will want to live differently", and clarified that in the coming ten years, she wants to see herself having 'three or four' children, be it with a partner or without a partner. She added "I feel like society makes me want to feel like, 'Oh, you got it wrong ...' They diminish you as a mother if there's not a dad in your kids' lives, But the only thing that matters is happiness; that's the only healthy relationship between a parent and a child. That's the only thing that can raise a child truly, is love."

The Rich History Behind the Legendary Indian Military Music

The Indian military band has a colonial history that the government is trying to defy by removing the British-influenced music from its military music.

The Beating Retreat music list by the Indian military released a few days ago caused a stir all over the country. The hymn, 'Abide With Me' was dropped from the list of music that is played at the annual Republic Day celebration.

The song was traditionally played at the end of the Republic Day ceremony every year. As per the government, it was done due to the 'ongoing process of decolonizing India'.

Many have said that the hymn was Mahatma Gandhi's favorite and dropping it from the ceremony is a part of the current government's scheme to minimize the significance of Gandhi.

Others have said it is a good decision to choose Indian music over non-Indian ones as India has a rich musical legacy of its own.

The argumentis not so simple, as both parties have strong points to back their arguments.

The history of Indian military music

The use of martial music can be found in the era of the Maratha Empire in the 17th century. The concept of an organized military band was first introduced to India in the 1700s by the British Army.

And before the First World War, all the regiments of the Indian Army had military bands which were formed to make the Indian population appreciate European music better.

The pipe bands were introduced to the Sikh, Pathan, and Gorkha regiments in the late 19th century.

After the independence of India, a massive gathering of the country's military bands is held at New Delhi each year on the Republic Day of the country since 1950. The arrangement is based on a 16th-century military ceremony held in England, which was used to call the nearby patrolling units back to the castle. The Scottish hymn, 'Abide With Me' is played every year at the end of the ceremony.

The debate

A military official said that the song has a strong connection with the Indian population as it honors all the fallen heroes who gave their lives for the country. A retired colonel has said that dropping the hymn is like defying tradition.

The senior adviser for the information and broadcasting ministry, Kanchan Gupta said that India has been independent for 75 years and there is no point in still following the British traditions. Many are accusing the government of religious politics for the step. Mr. Gupta denied the accusation and said it's all about the 'new India breaking free'.

'I feel 'fortunate' to have Sung 200 Songs with Lata Ji', Said an Emotional Udit Narayan

Singer Udit Narayan opens up an emotional note on the passing away of legendary Indian singer Lata Mangeshkar. The singer feels 'fortunate' to have worked with her.

Lata Mangeshkar, who was born on September 28, 1929, is widely regarded as one of India's best playback singers. She comes from a family of talented musicians and singers, and she has performed in over 1,000 films in 36 languages. 'Lata Didi,' also known as the 'Queen of Melody,' has recorded songs in over 36 Indian and other languages.

Lata Mangeshkar, the legendary vocalist, died in the Breach Candy Hospital in Mumbai on Sunday, February 6, at the age of 92. Over the last three weeks, the Bharat Ratna awardee was battling with life as she was under treatment for COVID-19 and pneumonia.

As India mourns the death of the 92-year-old renowned vocalist, a number of music industry celebrities have expressed their sorrow. Udit Narayan, who recently opened up about Lata Mangeshkar's death and dubbed the late singer 'Kohinoor Heera,' has joined the list.

On Sunday, singer Udit Narayan refused to believe that India's Nightingale, Lata Mangeshkar, was no longer alive. Narayan feels himself "fortunate" to have worked with the late vocalist on songs like Tu Mere Saamne (Darr, 1993), Mehendi Laga Ke Rakhna (Dilwale Dulhania Le Jayenge, 1995), and the title track of Dil To Pagal Hai (1997), among others.

The 66-year-old singer said "Main apne aap ko bhagyashali samajhta hoon. Jitna kaam mujhe Lata ji ke saath mila, mujhe nahin lagta [mere time ke] kisi aur singer ko mila hoga. I guess I am the only one who sang over 200 songs with Lata ji. And all of them were super hit. I also shared the stage with her around eight times (for live shows). She would say, 'Udit, tumhari awaaz original hai.'

Lata Mangeshkar ji saying something like that was like Goddess Saraswati blessing me."

When Narayan learned that the legend was no longer alive, he was saddened. Narayan gets emotional and says, "Ek hi Lata ji thi aur woh chali gayin," calling it a sad news for "Bollywood, the music fraternity, and the entire world."

Mangeshkar is an important part of India's musical history, according to the singer, and she will live on. "The 6th of February, 2022, was a dark day. She treated and loved me like a younger brother and wished me well whenever we crossed paths. It is no coincidence that she passed away around the time of Basant Panchami.

He signs off by saying, "It confirms she was Goddess Saraswati herself."

MUSIC INDUSTRY WITNESSES ANOTHER DEMISE OF THE DISCO KING OF BOLLYWOOD BAPPI LAHIRI

The Indian music industry is shocked by the untimely death of the legendary music composer and singer Bappi Lahiri. He was 69 and was suffering from various health issues.

The celebrated music composer and singer Bappi Lahiri died at the CritiCare Hospital Mumbai today at the age of 69. He popularized the disco music genre in the Indian music industry and had ruled it in the era of the 80s and 90s.

Only 9 days before Lata Mangeskar had died and now Bappi Lahiri's death is like lightening out the blue. Various music artists from film industry stars are mourning his sudden death.

The director of the CritiCAre Hospital, Deepak Namjoshi said, 'Lahiri had been admitted to the hospital for a month and was discharged on Monday. But his health deteriorated on Tuesday and his family called for a doctor to visit their home.'

He further added, 'He was brought to the hospital. He had multiple health issues. He died due to OSA (obstructive sleep apnea) shortly before midnight,'

The huge star is known for his hit numbers like 'Chalte Chalte', 'Disco Dancer', and many more can be added to this list. One of his latest compositions 'Bhankas' was released in 2020 in 'Baaghi 3'.

The legendary composer made his last television appearance in Salman Khan hosted reality show Bigg Boss 15, to promote his grandson Swastik's new song 'Baccha Party' on 17th October.

Last year in April he was admitted to Mumbai's Breach Candy

Hospital as he was tested COVID positive, though he recovered within a few days after the admission.

The whole Indian movie industry has not even recovered from the loss of the goddess of music and all of a sudden the industry losses its Disco King. His music was like a breath of fresh air to the gravitating musicality of the 70s.

The charming aura that he carried along with his heart-melting smile will not be there anymore.

Kavita Krishnamurthi, the iconic singer, who gave voice to various compositions of Bappi Lahiri, said 'It is extremely sad that Bappi da is gone. Another great musician is gone. He had so much music in him, and he still had so much work he could have done beautifully.'

She goes on to add, 'I have great respect for Bappi Da. He has been a brother to me for so many years. I got the opportunity to sing many songs for him. He gave me one of my biggest Bengali hits, Ami Kolkatar Roshogolla.' While remembering a Bengali song she sang for him.

Though, he will live through his musical body of works in the hearts of music lovers forever

Britney Spears has Signed a 15 Million Dollar Book Deal and is Set to Release a Tell-All Memoir

Three months after her long-held conservatorship ended, famous pop star Britney Spears has signed a massive book deal worth 15 million dollars.

Britney Spears is gearing up to share and speak about her side of the story.

PEOPLE confirmed that the 'Toxic' singer, 40, has inked a $15million book contract with Simon & Schuster for a tell-all memoir. The booking agreement was first announced by Page Six, three months after Britney's 13-year conservatorship was received by a judge.

Britney's publicist and lawyer have not replied to demands for comment. Requests for comment were not immediately returned by Simon & Schuster. The pop artist has been public about her estrangement from her family, including her father Jamie, mother Lynne, and sister Jamie Lynn, in recent months. In October, she said on social media, "This message is to my family ... for hurting me deeper than you'll ever know !!!.". "I know the conservatorship is about to be over but I still want justice !!!."

Britney, who has claimed she has been the victim of "conservatorship abuse" over the previous decade, is still embroiled in legal disputes with Jamie, who has demanded that he pay his legal bills even though her conservatorship was ended in November.

Jamie, 69, requested that his daughter's estate pay his legal team for "ongoing fiduciary obligations connected to the winding-up of the Conservatorship of the Person and Estate" in court filings submitted in December 2021.

Britney responded in January with paperwork stating that while acting as her conservator, Jamie had broken California's standards of conduct by engaging in financial malfeasance.

On Jan 19, at a court hearing to address legal fees, Los Angeles Judge Brenda Penny did not make a ruling on Jamie's request, instead decided that it would be discussed in a hearing on July 27.

On her Instagram account last week, the singer revealed a letter she received from the United States Congress, signed by Congressmen Charlie Crist and Eric Swalwell, which included an offer to meet. Britney and her lawyer Mathew Rosengart were congratulated on their recent "historic victories" in the letter, which was dated December 1, 2021.

Review On Super Bowl Show: Super Group of Hip-hop and R&B Legends Performance was a Feast and one to Remember:

On 14 February, the world witnessed arguably one of the top Super Bowl halftime shows featuring stars Dr Dre, Snoop Dogg, Eminem, Kendrick Lamar, and Mary J Blige. Three weeks before, the NFL released a four-minute trailer of the show, which was due to happen on February 14. The show hit differently as it was directionally and musically more inventive than the normal tropes of marching bands and fake fans on the pitch. Before the show began, the NBC hosts whispered it might become the greatest Super Bowl halftime show ever.

The show started with Snoop Dogg, donning a regal ultramarine blue tracksuit, and Dr Dre, atop a lookalike Compton Street set. The set had a replica of the MLK Memorial finished off with Dre with a small outside of the Compton Civic Centre. The show also featured a troupe of dancers freestyling across an aerial map of Compton's Streets, and inside the set's houses, more dancers and bands were playing on couches. The emergence of 50 Cent from the roof of one of the houses, in a hanging position from the ceiling recreating his classic 2003 video for In Da Club took place. Before fans could take a breath, Mary J Blige stood atop the set and sang Family Affair and No More Drama.

After her, Kendrick Lamar appeared with an army of zombie dancers from a series of cardboard boxes to perform Maad City and Alright. Then came Eminem, with his set-piece performance on 'Lose Yourself'. The rapper gave an astounding performance recalling all the classic memories his track gained and is well famous for. NFL came under some criticism for failing to back players who took the knee. Several big-name artists refused to perform earlier.

The joined performance from acclaimed artists Jennifer Lopez and Shakira gave returned their prestige to the slot. In simple words, it must be said that Super Bowl regained some credibility among fans after featuring five of the defining artists of 90s Hip-hop and R&B on the stage and led Dr Dre. There were several rumors regarding restrictions of Dre's lyrics, Eminem's request to take the knee at the ceremony, yet both these powerful moments did happen, and it was worth remembering for all the fans present in the stands.

THE ORIGIN AND MECHANICS OF INDIAN CLASSICAL MUSIC INSTRUMENT MRIDANGAM

India was the hub for different types of art, especially music in ancient times. One of the oldest and most significant musical instruments is Mridangam

Mridangam is a classical musical instrument that is used mostly in South Indian music. It is a popular percussion instrument, which is a double-headed drum and made of different types of wood. It is widely used in both vocal and instrumental music presentations in South India. The instrument is also known as maddal or maddalam in some places.

Etymology

The name of the instrument is formed from the union of two Sanskrit words 'Mrit' and 'Anga'. In Sanskrit 'Mrit' means clay or earth and 'Anga' means limb. In the earlier days when the instrument came into being, the instrument was made of hardened clay. Over the years people started using different kinds of woods to increase their durability.

History

Mridangam is known as Tannumai in Tamil culture. In ancient Tamil literature, Sangam literature there is the earliest mention o f the Mridangam. There is a detailed reference of the instrument in the Natyasastra. It was the most used and primary percussion instrument in the Sangam period. It was also used at the beginning of a war as people believed that its sound was holy and powerful enough to ward off the arrows of the enemies and protect the king. After the Sangam period, it is mentioned in the epic 'Silappatikaram'. In the epic, Mridangam formed a part of the Antarakottu, which is a musical collection performed at the beginning of any dramatic performance. This was later developed into the iconic Bharatnatyam. The player of the Miridangam holds the title Tannumai aruntozhil mutalvan.

The instruments have been mentioned in Hindu religious scriptures as well. It is said that it was one of the favorite instruments of Lord Ganesha and Lord Shiva's bahana, Nandi. According to the mythology, Nandi played Mridangam during Lord Shiva's Taandav dance. Hence, the instrument is known as Deva Vaadyam, the instrument of Gods. Another story depicts that the sound of Mridangam is a recreation of the sound that was made when Lord Indra traveled through heaven on his elephant. Many believe that the instrument Tabla was created by splitting a Mridangam in half.

Construction

The body of the Mridangam is carved out of a single block of wood. The insides of the woodblock are scooped out to make it hollow. Most Mridangam makers prefer Jackwood or Redwood to make it. But sometimes the core of a coconut tree and palm tree and the wood of Morogosa tree are also used to make Mridangam these days. The instrument has a barrel-like shape and its left head is a little bigger than the right head. The length of the instrument is generally one-and-a-half or two feet and it has a diameter of twenty-five to thirty centimeters. Making the preachment takes a lot of skill to reach perfection. On the right head of the drum, there are three concentric layers of the skin. The innermost layer that is complete skin is hidden from view. The concealed layer is made from cowhide and sheepskin is used for the inner ring and calfskin is used for the outer ring. Goatskin is also used in some Mridangams.

The left head has two rings: the outer ring is made of buffalo skin and the inner one is made of sheep or goatskin. The two parchments are stretched and kept in place with a plait made out of twisted leather straps. The leather braces connected to the plaits can be loosened or tightened to tune the instrument. Mridangam is very close to another classical percussion instrument Pakhavaj that is mostly used in the Hindustani traditional music in Northern India.

Mridangam schools

The first school to teach Mridangam playing was established during the 20th century. The most famous and prominent Mridangam schools then and now are the Thanjavur School and the Puddukottai School. Both schools have their distinct playing styles. Mridangam playing has become quite popular over the years and there are Mridangam players all over the world. It has been adopted by various music styles other than Indian classical music as well.

Notable Mridangam players

There are great Mridangam players both in the past and present. Some of the most notable Mridangam players across the world are Guruvayur Dorai, Anoor Anantha Krishna Sharma, Karaikudi Mani, Bombay C N Balaji, Kovai Venugopal, Mannargudi Easwaran, Prapancham Ravindran, Srimushnam Raja Rao, N. Lakshmi Ganesh, Rohan Krishnamurthy, Umayalpuram K. Sivaraman, Vasudevan Govindarajan, K. Murthy, Palghat R. Raghu, Tiruvarur Bhaktavatsalam, and more. Palghat Mani Iyer, Palani Subramanuam Pillai, and C. S. Murugabhupathy are known as the Midangam Trinity for their amazing contribution to the art.

In modern times, Mridangam is used in Carnatic music performances. Though they are most popular in Southern India, they are performed all over the world. It is a very popular instrument that is used in the Yakshagana orchestra as an accompanying instrument and there it is called Maddale.
