Miley Cyrus and Dolly Parton Set the Stage on Fire in the New Years' Eve Show in Miami

Miley Cyrus comes together with godmother Dolly Parton on stage, performing in matching outfits, during the NBC's holiday live program Miley's New Year's Eve Party in Miami.

Miley Cyrus kicked off her New Year with godmother Dolly Parton as the two singers were seen outfit-twinning and rocking some of the most iconic melodies.

In the wake of the second iteration of Miley's New Year's Eve Party on Saturday, December 31, 2022, in Miami, the country music legend Dolly Parton joined Cyrus on stage as they duetted to the latter's 2013 release 'Wrecking Ball' and Joan Jett & the Blackhearts's 'I Love Rock 'n' Roll.'

The second annual Miley's New Year's Eve Party is an NBC special that was hosted as a part of the holiday programming of the television Network.

For 'Wrecking Ball', Parton, 76, was seen wearing a shimmering silver gown with sheer cut-outs.

With the outfit, she paired matching earrings. In contrast to that, Cyrus, 30, wore a black body-hugging gown which gave her a classic, timeless look. They then transitioned into singing 'I Will Always Love You'.

However, it was the outfits of the opening number that became internet sensations. Miley stepped into an attractive LBD with cut-outs paired with animal print gloves, which she paired with a chunky choker and boots. She accompanied Patron who matched the vibe with a silhouette-hugging embellished jumpsuit with cut-outs in leopard print and studded lining. She accessorized the outfit with silver hoop earrings and black boots. They were seen clearly enjoying performing together on the stage, and fans couldn't seem to have enough.

The duo seemed to be really enjoying themselves and vibing to the rhythm of their music as the crowd cheered them on. This isn't the first time that Parton has collaborated with her goddaughter on stage, with the most memorable one being their mesmerizing 'Jolene' performance at an episode of The Voice in 2016 when the duo decided to wear a matching combination of black and pink.

While Patron's outfit was essentially pink with black lace and fur detailing and cutouts, Miley was seen wearing a shimmery one-shoulder LBD with lace and pink fur detailing on the arm.

Grabbing the opportunity during the live broadcast, Cyrus announced that she has some new music lined up for 2023. The last album that the artist released was Plastic Hearts in 2020.

After a commercial break during the live show, a video appeared that showed Miley walking down a street sporting a golden mini dress as a clip of her new song crooned in the background and her new single 'FLOWERS' was announced to be released on January 13.

BTS' Jimin's Solo Album Is Scheduled to be Released Next Month

2023 has already started and it is going to be another bright year for the members of BTS. While the success of Taeyang's hit project 'Vibe' is still buzzing in the industry, Jimin is getting ready for the release of his upcoming album. The anticipation is quite high as this singer and songwriter of BTS will reportedly drop the album the next month. This music project is going to mark Jimin's debut as a soloist.

South Korean news outlet Sports Donga said that February is decided as the month for release. However, BTS' label BigHit Music has not made any formal announcement since they are "currently coordinating schedules with regards to BTS Jimin's solo and will share more details once finalized," stated by XportNews and MyDaily.

Though other members of the band have already begun their musical careers as soloists, this is going to be Jimin's debut project.

It will be soon followed by j-hope's solo LP 'Jack In The Box' as well as RM's all-new musical project, titled 'Indigo'. There is no doubt that the anticipation is quite high among K-pop fans as well as music lovers from around the world.

Last year, the pop stars of BTS announced to proceed with their solo endeavors as they have to serve their mandatory military duties. The announcement was followed by Jin's "The Astronaut".

However, the members will soon join a band in 2025.

Though Jimin has not released any music projects, his collaboration works got profoundly popular on music streaming platforms. One of the most unique projects would be his duo with Ha Sung-woon on 'With You', the OST from 'Our Blue'.

This tvN's K-drama has impressed a lot of viewers and what made the world go crazy, is the amazing OST. The track notched the top spot on Billboard's US Digital Songs Sales chart as well as proved itself as the best K-drama OST of 2022.

Other than that, Jimin has also participated with Benny Blanco and Snoop Dogg along with other members like Jin, V, and Jung Kook for 2022's hit project "Bad Decisions." The song has garnered over 48 million views.

Last September, Jimin dropped a photo folio named 'Me, Myself, and Jimin' 'ID: Chaos.'

An All-Star Affair: Celtic Connections 30th Anniversary Concert, Glasgow Royal Concert Hall

The grand opening concert of this year's 30th Celtic Connections festival was ambitious. The platform was huge enough to encompass the world at Glasgow Royal Concert Hall.

The Celtic Connections have always kept their grand opening grand. And this year there was no change at this point. The 30th Edition of this grand musical event has returned after 2 years of a pause due to the pandemic. On Thursday, the celebration of Celtic, folk, roots, and world music got an exceptional opening. The artist list included huge artists from all over the world. For over three decades they have taken part in this magnificent musical meet.

The event started on the 20th of January and continues to the 5th of February. There are about 1500 performers, 150 shows, and 30 venues across Glasgow. This is an 18-day festival including ceilidhs, workshops, talks, and exhibitions. In January 2020, during the last "live" festival of Celtic Connections took place. About 130,000 attendees were there to celebrate music. Next in 2021, the entire program was streamed online.

But last year with the omicron variant, several Celtic Connections events were canceled. Some took place with a smaller audience limited to 200 people only so that the social distancing could be maintained. However, this year there were no mandated rules that should be followed in order to make the show happen. And it started with a bang at the Glasgow Royal Concert Hall on 20th January.

Donald Shaw, the creative producer said he went into the festival with "feelings of immense determination, pride, and gratitude". He added, "Sharing our music and our arts is a vital part of our human existence - it allows us to feel rooted in place and connected to one another, enriching our lives in the process. Over the last 30 years, this is what Celtic Connections has always been about."

Everyone in the crowd witnessed the embodiment of music that day. From Sierra Hull's lightning dexterity on mandolin to Peat and Diesel's folk punk tub-thumping to Maeve Gilchrist's commanding solo harp, this day was making every music enthusiast excited. The 22-piece National Youth Pipe Band of Scotland has got named by Massie as "Top Gun for pipers".

More excitement is yet to come and the opening scene has foreshadowed the amount of audience engagement they are about to experience in this 30th Anniversary Concert of Celtic Connections Music Festival, "Europe's leading traditional music festival".

Miley Cyrus

is buying her own 'Flowers'
while breaking her own records

The music industry glazed with Miley Magic as the singer is making some new records with her latest single 'Flowers', buzzing at the top of every song chart.

There is still a lot of time for the release of Miley Cyrus's upcoming album 'Endless Summer Vacation' but it seems like the vacation has already started with the latest single 'Flowers' which was released on January 13. The release date is particularly important as it is the birthday of her

ex-husband
Liam

Hemsworth.

The unwavering singer-songwriter did an amazing job in crafting this single which offers a vivid picture of the tumultuous relationship between Miley and Liam. Whether it is the pungent lyrics or the empowering aura, Miley made sure the song speaks for herself.

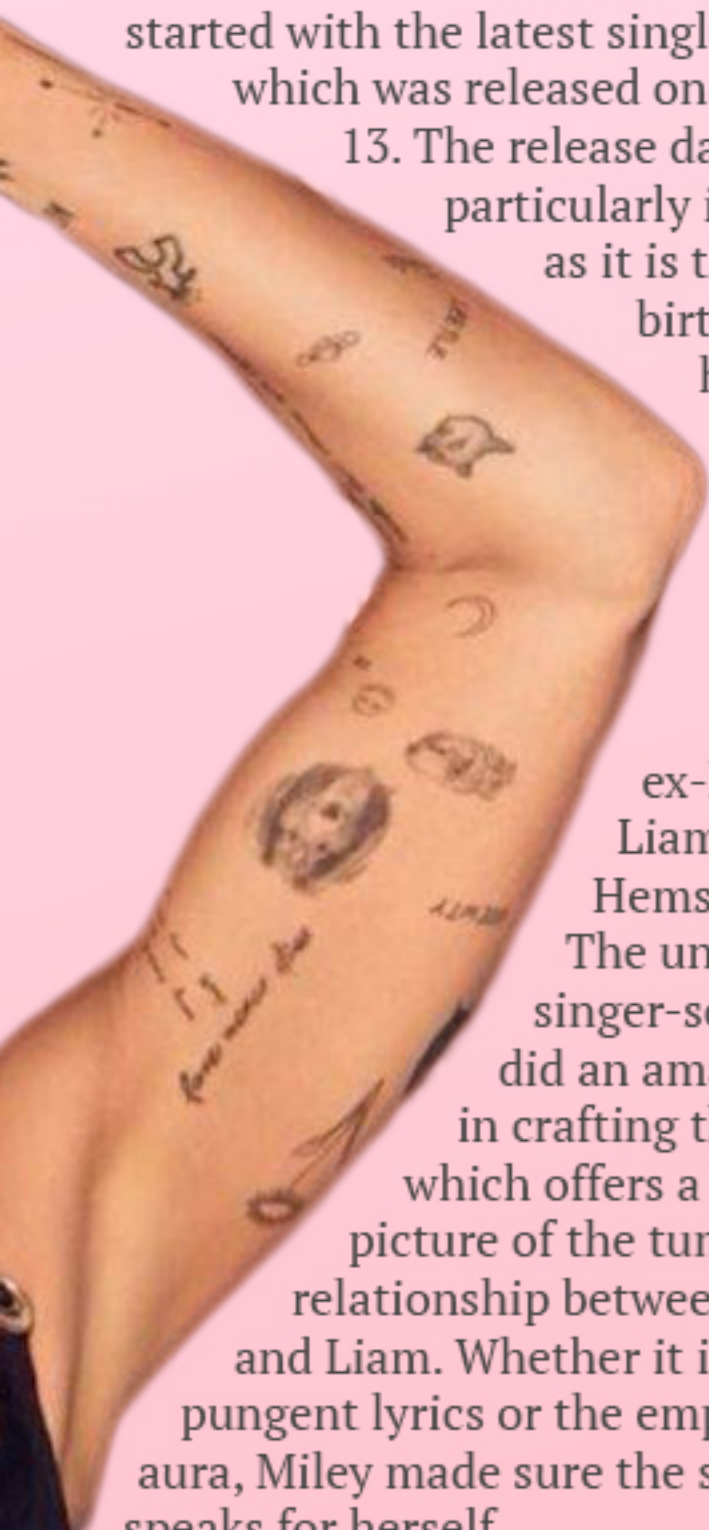

Within a week of the release, 'Flowers' has broken all the records by gaining the most streams in a single week while topping the charts in various countries. After a week, the song gained over 83 million plays on Spotify and the number is increasing drastically with time. It has also debuted as No. 1 on the Billboard Hot 100 chart which is an epic return by the 'Wrecking Ball'- singer after nearly a decade. Currently being no.1 around the world, the song is creating another milestone in Miley's music career.

However, the song is creating more buzz among the fans as it appears like an open letter to Liam. Not only it was released on his birthday but the track also offers a resemblance to Bruno Mar's hit single 'When I Was Your Man', a song particularly dedicated by Liam to Miley when they were in a relationship. Though they met in 2009, they split after eight months of married life in 2019. Fans are discovering more Easter eggs as the song lyrics go "built a home and watched it burn", which might be a reference to their home in Malibu that was burnt down in the Woolsey fires in late 2018.

When it comes to the official music video of 'Flowers', a fan pointed out that the dance move shown at the beginning of the video is something that Miley has already done before. She pulled this move before on Red Carpet with Liam and he was quite embarrassed with her; saying, "Don't do it, don't do it... We're on the carpet." There are many other moments in the track that shows a direct reference to her ex-husband.

Quite evidently, Miley is moving on from her toxic past and this empowerment is shared by all of her fans around the world.

Selena Gomez is back on Instagram, asking "Can You Tell I'm Back?"

Selena Gomez is back on Instagram and this time a huge number of 370 million followers. The pop star shut down her Instagram account 4 years back and her sudden comeback this Wednesday is creating a huge buzz among Gomez fans. She was the second most followed woman on Instagram when she decided to quit social media.

On January 11, the singer suddenly posted a series of low-key bathroom selfies with the caption, "Wait can you tell I'm back on Instagram?". Around a year ago, Selena Gomez opened up about her troubled relationship with the application. The singer said, "I became aware that my little world is complicated, but the picture is much bigger than the stuff I deal with. I have problems with depression and anxiety, and I found it difficult for me to be me."

She further said, "I didn't want to post anything on social media because I realized that I was in a situation where I was extremely blessed. What could I possibly post or say?" Selena deleted Instagram from her phone and turned the keys to one of her team, realizing that it is affecting her mental health issues.

The singer explained, "At one point Instagram became my whole world, and it was really dangerous. In my early 20s, I felt like I wasn't pretty enough. There was a whole period in my life when I thought I needed makeup and never wanted to be seen without it." Clearly, she was not really doing well with her bipolar disorder and anxiety issues. Her fans must have understood her situation.

Selena also said, "The older I got, the more I evolved and realized that I needed to take control of what I was feeling. I wanted to be able to look in the mirror and feel confident to be who I am." She seemed quite satisfied with her decision as she said, "Taking a break from social media was the best decision that I've ever made for my mental health."

I created a system where I still don't have my passwords. And the unnecessary hate and comparisons went away once I put my phone down."

But she also added, "I'll have moments where that weird feeling will come back, but now I have a much better relationship with myself." With her comeback on social media, fans are quite happy. She also posted a few pictures that gave butterflies to many.

BLACKPINK Hits 2 Billion Views On YouTube With 'Ddu- Du Ddu-Du' Music Video

It is not astonishing that BLACKPINK has been setting the bar high for Korean pop girl gangs around the world but this time they have hit a milestone that no K-pop music artist has done before. This heartthrob girl group has garnered more than 2 billion views on YouTube with their hit number, 'Ddu-Du Ddu-Du'. The official music video is revolving at the epitome of everyone's attention.

It is not the only BLACKPINK track that is smashing some big view count as there are other tracks following not too far. The music video for 'Kill This Love' has gained over 1.7 billion views and still increasing. The bass-heavy number 'Boombayah' is at 1.5 billion-plus views. Similarly, there is 'How You Like That' at 1.1 billion views.

It is not only the group performances but Lisa, Jeenie, Rosé and Jisoo are gaining millions of views with their solo ventures.

The bombastic presence of the girl group in their music videos cannot be replaced and that is why singles from their latest album 'Born Pink' like 'Pink Venom' and 'Shut Down' is also garnering hundreds of millions of views within a few months of their premiere on YouTube.

'Ddu-Du Ddu-Du' was originally released back in June and appears in BLACKPINK's debut EP 'Square Up'. The track offers a fine blend of trap beats and bubblegum pop music which definitely makes many listeners bob their heads.

The quartet idols' quirky finger gun-waving choreography has put a lot more sensation to the track which resulted in getting viral. This track has made this group's very first entry into many top charts such as the Billboard Hot 100. The song also topped the World Digital Song Sales chart. However, the craze drastically increased after the release of their sophomore studio album, 'Born Pink'. It also kicked off its long-awaited world tour and participation in U.S. music awards shows.

They performed the track 'Pink Venom' at the 2022 MTV Video Music Awards. While earning the honor of TIME's 2022 Entertainer of the Year, they also took home the worldwide fans' choice award at the 2022 MAMA Awards.

The high rise of this Korean girl gang is being retained by each member's solo musical creations. BLACKPINK also looked back to this successful year with its YouTube Series, "Born Pink Memories".

The fans are saying, this is just beginning as they are certain that there will be more milestones created by the group in the coming days.

Taylor Swift's Pet Olivia Benson Is Topping the Charts For Wealthiest Pets

It is not just celebrities whose net worth can astonish you but their pets as well. Taylor Swift's beloved cat has an estimated net worth of $97 million and is known as Olivia Benson. This fine feline has landed at number three on the list of the world's wealthiest pets.

The list Forbes Style was compiled by the website known as AllAboutCats.com which works in the field. They collect data from Instagram in order to calculate their popularity and net worth. The data mainly determines "how much each of these pets could make per Instagram." Another online tool has been used for this purpose, known as Influence Marketing Hub which helped to estimate each pet's Instagram earnings per post along with the average number of likes.

However, it is not the most scientific way or a proper method to determine the worth as the owner can play the bigger part too.

Olivia Benson does not even have an Instagram account yet it has gained popularity with Taylor Swift's humongous career. According to AllAboutCats, Olivia is worth more than $97 million which is huge.

The website further explained, "The Scottish Fold earned her fortune starring alongside her owner in several music videos, has crafted her own merchandise line, and has had cameos in many big-budget ads, including for the likes of Diet Coke and Ned Sneakers."

It is quite obvious for the fans to question whether Swift's other two cats Benjamin Button and Meredith Grey worth the same since they were not mentioned on the list. It is an assumption that perhaps people got lazy during the new year celebration and skipped their job.

Olivia Benson is not the only celebrity pet there were many on the list. Though she was the highest ranked on the field, there was the German shepherd Gunther VI whose net worth is $500 million and then there is Nala Cat at $100 million. Among the celebrity pets, there is Oprah Winfrey's four dogs will inherit $30 million each when Oprah passes away.

Similarly, there is Karl Lagerfeld's Birman cat named Choupette who will inherit around $13 million when Lagerfeld dies. Betty White's adopted Golden Retriever named Pontiac will be inheriting $5 million after her death. It is quite evident that these pets are wealthier than most of us.

MEXICAN POP ICON GLORIA TREVI CAUGHT IN A NEW LAWSUIT OVER SEX CULT ALLEGATIONS

Gloria Trevi, one of the most beloved pop stars of Mexico, has landed herself in a legal battle again over a sexual assault that happened in the early 1990s. She has once again been accused of "grooming" Two Jane Does who were underage girls for the benefit of her former producer Sergio Andrade. Two Jane Does have alleged that Gloria, now 54, and Sergio have used their "role, status, and power" to initiate sexual contact with them when their age was mere 13 years and 15 years respectively. This new complaint was filed shortly before December 31st, which was a deadline for the three-year "lookback" window. This temporarily lifted the statute of limitations on childhood sex assault claims in California.

The Mexican pop diva and her ex-producer, neither one of them is directly mentioned in the lawsuit, but according to the details, it is quite clear that they are going to be the top two defendants. The details included the concerts that Trevi played in the 1990s and albums that she recorded at that time. According to the lawsuit, Two Jane Does mention that Trevi approached them when they were underage and manipulated and lured them into joining the music training program, purported by her former producer Andrade. The singer promoted this program as an opportunity that could make them into elite stars. The victims also claimed that the pop singer groomed them into being sex slaves for Andrade, and much of that abuse happened in Los Angeles county itself. The lawsuit further states that by the time the girls were recruited the singer had already become a worldwide known persona and had gained international fame. Especially due to the edgy lyrics and her rebellious persona. At that time, Trevi was called Mexico's Madonna, and her then-producer, Andrade was credited for the behind-the-scenes production. This was several years before the once famous and celebrated duo disappeared ahead of the bunch of sexual allegations from multiple former trainees in the program. The claims broke out to be an international scandal where Andrade was painted as a serial pedophile and Trevi, to be his willing accomplice.

In January of 200, the duo was arrested in Brazil after a successful international manhunt. Trevi has already spent four years in pre-trial detention which was ultimately acquitted when a judge overruled claiming there was insufficient evidence.

In the previous lawsuit, there was not enough evidence that could support the allegations and charges which were filed for rape, kidnapping, and corruption of minors which was filed by the Mexican prosecutors. Although after four years of awaiting trial, the former producer of Trevi, Andrade was convicted of corruption of minors, rape, and kidnapping.

But he only ended up spending one more year in jail. This new complaint calls for a trial by jury and the number of damages will be decided at the time of the trial.

Lisa Marie Presley Passes Away at the Age of 54, Just Days after Celebrating Her Late Father's Birthday

The only child of the American rock-n-roll legend Elvis Presley, Lisa Marie Presley, passes away at the age of 54. The grave news was announced by her mother, Priscilla Presley, but she did not cite the cause of death. American media revealed that she had suffered a cardiac arrest.

Born into the spotlight in 1968, Lisa Marie, following in the footsteps of her father, also became a singer and songwriter and has released three albums. Her debut album 'To Whom It May Concern' was released in 2003 and sold several thousands of copies and received immensely positive reviews. Presley was also known for her contributions to several charitable causes.

Her personal life came into the limelight with the advent of her series of illustrious marriages to musicians Danny Keough and Michael Lockwood, to the legendary pop singer Michael Jackson, and also to Oscar-winning actor Nicolas Cage. From her marriages, she had four children, including actress Riley Keough. Presley's son, Benjamin Keough, committed suicide in 2020.

While sharing the devastating news, Presley's mother praised her daughter as being "the most passionate, strong and loving woman" she had ever known and asked for privacy during this time of grief. According to the reports of TMZ, the singer was found in her bedroom motionless on Thursday morning. A spokesperson for Los Angeles emergency services informed that following reports of a woman having a cardiac arrest, a group of paramedics was dispatched to the artist's home in Calabasas. After performing CPR, Presley was rushed to the hospital since they found "signs of life" in her.

As the news of her death became viral, tributes poured out from fans and friends of the artist from across the globe.

Heartfelt condolences poured out from Tom Hanks, who starred in Elvis, a biopic made on her father, and also from his wife Rita Wilson. Celebrities like actor John Travolta, singer LeAnn Rimes, and actresses Leah Remini and Jennifer Tilly took to social media to express their grief and to send condolences.

Lisa Marie Presley made her last appearance at the Golden Globe Awards on Tuesday, lauding Austin Butler's act in Elvis, where he had played the role of her father. Appreciating his performance, the late singer told ET that it has taken her "five days to process it" because the performance was "so incredible and so spot on and just so authentic".

Just days before her death, the singer had visited Graceland, a mansion that her late father owned at Memphis in Tennessee to celebrate what would have been the 88th birthday of the music legend.

Yagnik, who reached the peak of her musical career during the 1990s and 2000s, has left behind global artists like Taylor Swift, Beyonce, and BTS to achieve this milestone.

The singer has garnered 15.3 billion streams on YouTube with an average of 42 million streams per day in the year 2022. Her popularity on the video streaming site has received a significant boost in the last two years and has been growing steadily each day, as she has been recorded to have received 16.6 billion streams in 2020 and 17 billion streams in the year 2021.

Apart from Yagnik, three other Indian singers made it to the top five in the list of highest streams, namely, Udit Narayan with 10.8 billion streams, Arijit Singh with 10.7 billion streams, and Kumar Sanu with 9.09 billion streams. All of them have collaborated with Yagnik previously to crunch out superhit numbers. Both Udit Narayan and Kumar Sanu, along with Alka Yagnik, had ruled the Bollywood music scene in the 1990s.

Fans of Bollywood music were elated at the news of the artist leaving behind internationally acclaimed artists. Ranking second to her on the list is the singer Bad Bunny having 14.7 billion streams. Popular artists like BTS won 7.95 billion streams, while

STUDY SAYS BTS AND BILLIE EILISH MUSIC ARE MORE HELPFUL FOR SLEEPING

Listening to music has always been helpful for better sleep. In recent times scientists have found out that loud music also has the ability to fall asleep. It is an obvious thing that different people choose variant kinds of music while sleeping. There is no certain genre or specific list of music that is more useful.

Recently Kira Vibe Jespersen, the assistant professor of the Centre for Music in the Brain at Aarhus University in Denmark has said that 'Our hypothesis is that familiarity with the music makes the music very predictable to the brain, and this predictability may enable sleep, despite the music being upbeat and energetic'. To make the research even better and to analyze them, scientists have used 200000 songs from 1000 Spotify playlists.

These playlists are made especially for enhancing sleep. In most cases, in people's playlists, they have found more songs that are slow and calm. But in the study, they have also found out that in those playlists, there are a lot of energetic songs too that people usually don't consider while sleeping.

For example, there were tracks like 'Dynamite' by the band BTS, 'The Scientist' by Coldplay, and 'Lovely' by Billie Eilish ft. Khalid. All these tracks are higher-degree but found in the playlist of listeners.

These are some tracks that are not popularly known for sleeping. From this research, it is known that there is a large variation of music in the sleep-enhancing playlist.

Kira Vibe Jespersen has also said 'I was surprised by the amount of variation in the music that people choose to listen to for sleep... I was expecting some degree of variation, but not that much'.

Researchers are saying that to come to a prominent conclusion, they need to get their hands on the sleep data of users.

Otherwise, they cannot gather the knowledge of what kind of music is more helpful for better sleep. But they confirm one thing different people find relaxation in different kinds of songs. Thus it is not abnormal to listen to higher-degree music for sleeping.

Along with that she also said that they need to know more about the clinical use of music and its effectiveness.

This is a list of 10 African musicians who you need to look out for in 2023 as they are expected to take this journey of making African music more global.

10. Bloody Civilian This Nigerian singer and songwriter have recently gotten huge attention from all over the world and she 100% deserves it all. Bloody Civilian was recently featured on the soundtrack album of one of the biggest movies in the world in 2022, "Black Panther: Wakanda Forever". She also teamed up with the Mavin star Rema on "Wake Up". After the release of the album, the artist also released a solo single "How To Kill A Man". For this self-produced single, she studied music production as well.

Apparently, fans can expect something big from the artist and we cannot keep calm!!

9. Ami Faku It seems like a decade since the artist released her debut album "iMali" which featured some huge names and contributions from Blaq Diamond, the famous duo. But she has not been completely silent since. In the previous year, she also worked with Prince Kaybee, Black Coffee, Aymos, and Karyendasoul. So a new album from her this year will not be much of a surprise!

8. Victory The Nigerian artist in one word has dominated the country's music scenes this year. He started the year with a feature on Mayorkun's song "Holy Father", which went ahead and became hugely successful. Then he released an EP "Outlaw", which consisted of seven tracks featuring KTIZO and Tempoe. Some of the hits are "Apollo", "Kolomental", "Jolene" and lastly, "Soweto" which went viral on social media. So, it is not far to get a full-length album from this genius.

7. Young Jonn Always known as the Wicked Producer, the switching of this music lover to a singer was shocking for all. His first viral hit "Dada" and the remix of it featuring Davido, became an even bigger hit. He went on to dominate the music charts with the track, "Xtra Cool" and his chartbuster EP "Love Is Not Enough Vol 2". Fans are expecting to have something big from him this year.

6. Tems If any Nigerian artist has the most successful year in 2022, it has to be Tems. She can easily take the crown of the Queen of the African music industry in 2022 and it has truly been her year. Nigerians were already familiar with this force for her several hits like "Mr. Rebel", "Try Me", and the "For Broken Ears" EP. However, she became worldwide known for her collaborative hit with Wizkid, "Essence". Then she went on to bag other collaborations with world-famous superstars like Drake, Beyoncé, and Future. You have also heard her with Rihanna on the soundtrack album of "Black Panther: Wakanda Forever". She released another EP titled "If Orange Was A Place" and also became hugely successful. Now everyone is waiting for her debut album this year and the anticipation is out of this world!

5. Davido The list will be incomplete without the fan-favorite OBO on it. The artist mainly focused on collaborations this year, yet still dominated the industry. He has become Africa's one of the most prominent artists that the world knows, besides Burna Boy and Wizkid. The previous year, we all have seen him in collaboration with Young Jonn, DaBaby, Focalistic, CKay, Pheelz, and more. The gospel-inspired track, "Stand Strong" with Sunday Service Choir, and his contribution to the World Cup song

"Hayya Hayya: Better Together" with Trinidad Cardona and Aisha were among the most highlighted works. Everyone is anticipating his follow-up album this year.

4. Sho Madjozi Sho Madjozi made her comeback and marked her first lead entry to the airwaves in a while with the hit track "Toro" featuring DDG. She took some time off the scene and it proved to be better for the artist as her comeback was something worth remembering. She is now all set to hit the road and open for the famous French artist Stromae at Madison Square Garden. And yes, fans have a confirmation that there will be new music coming this year.

3. Gyakie This Ghanaian singer and songwriter had a memorable last year where the African music scene witnessed the beautiful vocals of the artist on the immense hit "Forever". The track went along and became a massive success which then returned with a remix with Omah Lay and became a bigger hit. In 2022, she released "My Diary EP", which included the viral hit track "Something". For this year, the artist has even bigger plans for her music career. The fans are hoping for it to be a full-length album as her recent collaboration with South African star AK on the track "Paradise" also became an instant hit. So, the fans are really excited as to what the artist has for them in her sleeves and we are hoping it would be something fresh, unique, and beautiful.

2. AKA Some people would argue that AKA was late to the party in 2022, but some would firmly say he was on time as long as he is giving quality music to the listeners. The singer spent most of 2022 recording his next album. He also released the hit track "Lemons (Lemonade)" featuring artist Nasty C. It can be said that the song is perfect for the hustlers, that it speaks about what is life and how to be successful at any cost. He has announced that his next album "Mass Country" will be released in early 2023. In 2022, he also released "Paradise" which featured Musa Keys and Gyakie.

1. Black Sherif If we talk about which country gave us the best music in 2022, the winner would undoubtedly be Ghana. Most African people have sung along to Black Sherif's "Kwaku The Traveller" in the past year which made him a revelation on the airwaves. The artist was unstoppable in 2022, as he not only gifted with one hit song but also released a brand new album "The Villain I Never Was". Not only Africa but the world could not ignore him as well. The artist stayed on top with several hits like "Second Sermon Remix", "45" and "Soja". This made the fans and music lovers anticipate what he will release in 2023.

There are also artists like Mayorkun, Magixx, Oxlade, Samthing Soweto, Major League DJz, etc. who are all set to release in 2023. With all these musical appearances and records, 2023 will continue to be a musically-enriched year for the African music industry.

Comedian-Turned-Musician Kim Bertrand's New Video of 'motherfaker' Is an Absolute Treat to Watch

Kim Bertrand, a punk-rock music artist is making her name in the industry steadily and her latest attempt shows she is here for the long run. The music video for 'motherfaker' is getting praise for its stunning visuals and creative direction. We recently had the opportunity to sit for an interview with Kim Bertrand so let's see what we talked about.

DMR: Welcome to Daily Music Roll, let me start by congratulating you on the successful music video release of 'motherfaker'. How are you feeling?

Kim Bertrand: Bloated. And thanks. I don't know if I'd call the video successful, but I certainly succeeded in having kale for lunch three days in a row.

DMR: The music video starts with an image that focuses on a beautiful blue eye from where the viewers notice you in the reflection. This is such a unique concept, to begin with, so tell me is there any symbolism or hidden meaning behind that?

Kim Bertrand: The song and the video are all about appearances – when we're looking at ourselves in the mirror, trying to mold and shape what's there into whatever it is we want other people to see. So, you'll notice when you see me in the eye's reflection, I'm staring right back at it as though I'm looking in a mirror, checking myself out, adjusting my hair and so on. It's a visual metaphor for how obvious it is to onlookers when we're trying to be something we aren't.

DMR: Throughout the music video, the audience gets to see various visuals that somehow represent what you are feeling as a human. It is so expressive that it makes the audience indulge in thinking, was that your true intent?

Kim Bertrand: I'm not the biggest fan of people thinking. What good has thinking ever done for humanity? If we didn't think we'd still be banging rocks together, eating mammoth meat. Thinking is why people started eating kale. We were all happy to keep plucking the little wooly hairs out of our pliocene porterhouse until some prehistoric clog decided to go around eating all the plants and compiling a list of the ones that don't poison you. And every ten years, since the invention of society, people go down that list and pick a random green thing to hype up as the next superfood that'll make you live longer and regrow your hair and make you better at sex and rainbows leak from your tits. And about ten years ago, they had gone so far down the list that they finally arrived at kale – something I assume Guantanamo Bay was using to extract confessions from any prisoner who still had a functioning tongue. It shouldn't even be on the list. Did you know Kale has thallium in it? They put the same thing in rat poison. It's time to amend the Geneva convention. What was the question again?

DMR: What serves as an inspiration behind making this record?

Kim Bertrand: Social media for sure. Everybody – especially women, I think – everybody is feeling that pressure to fit themselves into a marketable box. A lot of my comedy career has been defined by the stuff I used to do on social media and I definitely felt the pressure to portray myself as more successful than I was, better off financially than I was, happier than I was . . . And I'd worked in new media production for years before that. I was there at the very beginning, at the birth of social marketing, back when it was still called "social networking" and pretended to be a tool for staying connected. But I assure you, it's been a capitalist cream-dream since its inception. Again, we could be banging rocks, stroking our pet sabretooths, and doodling on walls. But we had to go and ruin it all by thinking.

DMR: What did you want to portray through your video and do you think you were successful in that, especially with how the audience is reacting to it?

Kim Bertrand: I won't know until more people watch it, but the reception has been positive so far and I think people get the overall message about struggling in a culture that rewards authenticity yet demands constant self-promotion. The irony of this – promoting the song here, on my socials, submitting to playlists, all the necessary evils of trying to get listeners – it isn't lost on me. But I'm so profoundly irony poisoned at this point that I'm OK with it.

DMR: Besides making music, you are also a working comedian. So which one is that you love the most? Making music or performing as a comedian on stage?

Kim Bertrand: Well, that's easy. Because I straight up hate doing comedy. I mean, I hate it in the same way a junkie comes to hate heroin, in that I feel amazing after I perform but want to steal a TV from your grandma when I come back down. I don't know, they're vastly different pursuits in my mind. Comedy is all about eliciting one singular emotion. It's very in-the-moment, and if they don't connect with you in that moment, if you aren't getting those laughs right then and there, you're failing as a comedian. For me, music is something I can make and not care what anybody thinks. I want people to listen, of course, but music is far more subjective than comedy. If they don't connect with it, no loss to my ego. Somebody, somewhere, someday, might love it. That's enough for me.

DMR: You are currently residing in New York City, does the city serve as an inspiration in your creative life?

Kim Bertrand: I cringe to say so, but that's one of those clichés about New York that happens to be true. It is a creatively energizing place because you're exposed to a lot of raw humanity here. You don't watch a guy sh*t in a box on the W train at eight in the morning on a Tuesday without wondering how the hell we, the collective we, arrived here. I think a lot of New Yorkers get jaded by it and long for the sanitized, live laugh love vibes of suburbia. But there's more life happening in one New York block than ten miles of sprawl. I don't think I could ever give that up.

DMR: You like to portray a darker side of yourself through your music. Do you feel like when you are making music, you are in a different world where you can express yourself freely?

Kim Bertrand: Absolutely. There's so much more I can express, emotion-wise, than I can with comedy. Like comedy can be dark, it can make serious points, but you can never linger on those emotions too long. The point, ultimately, is to uplift. So you're always twisting negative emotions into a cathartic, uplifting release. But I'm a very moody person. I need music as an outlet, especially for those complex emotions that I can't articulate in language. Only music can express those feelings language is incapable of expressing. Visual art, maybe, but even that is often processed through a kind of linguistic lens in our minds. Music just bypasses all of that. It's some rock banging sh*t.

DMR: What made you interested in making music? Any special memories that you want to share with the world?

Kim Bertrand: My uncle Dan played guitar. By any objectively-imposed measure, his life was out-of-sorts. But he was the absolute coolest human being I knew. Just an amazing guitarist with a really unique voice buried under a mountain of self-doubt. He gave me my first Nirvana CD. He gave me a whole case of CDs I had to hide from my parents; Mudhoney, Alice in Chains, Local H, Pixies, Smashing Pumpkins. All that great 90s alternative stuff that I love to this day. In a fair world, he'd be listed among those greats. But the world ain't fair, is it? The world will never know his music, and I eat kale every day as a form of self harm.

DMR: You have a second album coming out in the next month. Do you have any tour planned out for that?

Kim Bertrand: At the rate I'm eating kale, I fear any live performances I do to promote this thing may quickly devolve into 2023's G.G. Allin reboot. I'll have to remember to bring a box on the train ride over.

DMR: Any special message for your audience?

Kim Bertrand: I know it looks glamorous because all the rock stars do it, but please, please, please, don't do kale. It isn't worth your life.

Imnainla Jamir Plays Indian Notional Anthem On Electric Guitar, Leaving The Crowd Speechless

Last month at Nagaland's annual Hornbill Festival Imnainla Jamir performed the opening of the 10-day festival. Since then, she has experienced mounting views from all over the world for an electrifying rendition of the Indian National Anthem. The powerful performance has been appreciated by people from around the globe as she came up with a wonderful musical essence.

Jamir used electric guitar while Indian National Anthem has always been regarded as a cultural symbol of India. The new fusion of western instruments with the most iconic Indian identification was not just loved by the Indians but also by the world. Being an emerging star her skills were truly magnificent.

This was the 23rd edition of the 10-day festival Hornbill. And the musical ceremony was inaugurated on the 1st of December. For years Hornbill has been a traditional meet-up where you will get to experience several aspects of folklore including tribal dances, music, and delicacies. As a sign of the world-changing Imnainla Jamir has performed flawlessly, these are the core pillars of this festival. The Mokokchung guitarist shared her thoughts after experiencing this supped popularity for her musical brilliance.

She said, "The reactions have been overwhelming. I have received appreciation not only in person but also over different social media platforms." She continued and confessed that she didn't have much time while she was trying "to master the piece." And she was extremely nervous about the reactions she is going to get whether people will appreciate her or reject this piece. But after being encouraged by the world she is willing to cover other patriotic numbers as well.

In 1969, Jimi Hendrix played 'The Star-Spangled Banner' at the end of Woodstock.

That day he recreated the sound of the wars with his guitar and left the crowd speechless as his guitar cried and wailed for 3 minutes straight.

For the First Time Ever in History, Whites Didn't Get A Chance In the Coachella Headliners

Coachella Music Festival is something everyone looks forward to and this year is going to be a most interesting one as there will be the first-ever K-pop headliner, the first-ever Latin pop artist in the headliner, and an epic comeback by none other than Frank Ocean. What is even more interesting is that none of the headliners this year is a white artist.

On Tuesday, this well-celebrated music festival declared its lineup for 2023. There will be BLACKPINK, Band Bunny, Frank Ocean, and many other artists featured as headliners absolutely 100% non-white which is bizarre considering the previous years.

Embracing the diversity in the music industry, The 2020 festival almost made history with Travis Scott, Rage Against the Machine, and many others who performed as headliners. It would have been a great festival but due to the disastrous effects of the global pandemic, the fest was canceled.

Looking back to 2018's iteration, Beyoncé was the first ever Black woman to be featured on the headliners. The festival was quite dynamic as well where the other two headliners were The Weeknd and Eminem.

This year's list of performers also consists of a huge amount of diversity in every genre. Starting from Latin pop star Becky G to Haitian DJ Kaytranada, Afrobeats star Burna Boy to rapper Metro Boomin; there will be high-octane energy on Friday's second line. Day two will be featuring a performance from Euphoria's Labrinth. Day three, on the other hand, will offer Colombian star Kali Uchis, Indian-British electronic artist Jai Paul, New York rapper A Boogie, and many others.

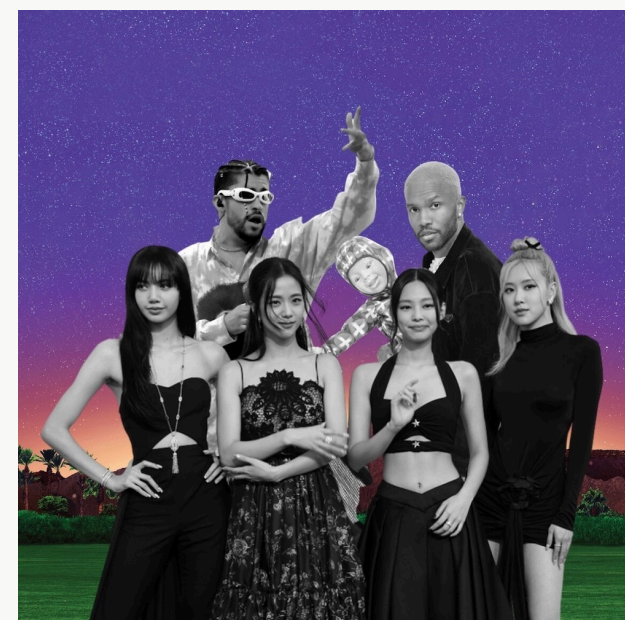

The 2023 lineup will also be featuring many other South-Asian music artists such as Joy Crooks, Ali Sethi, Diljit Dosanjh, and Jai Wolf. Some of the other notable artists from the lineup are Idris Elba, ¿Téo?, Doechii, 070 Shake, GloRilla, Eladio Carrión, Flo Milli, Los Fabulosos Cadillacs, Willow, Rae Sremmurd, Noname and Latto.

The festival tweeted, "Ugh was stuck in drafts ?"

Jakarta, and Kaohsiung. However, given the recent turn of events, an announcement of new shows in more countries might be announced. So far, the tour has met with positive reviews from most critics.

The previous week, on January 4, BLACKPINK became the first K-Pop music group to gain 2 billion views on YouTube for a music video on their 2018 single 'DDU-DU DDU-DU'. The group's label YG Entertainment also announced a solo debut release by Jisoo in 2023, which she is working hard at.

She has finished the photo shoot for the album jacket and has worked on the music production wherever she could take a timeout in the midst of the tour. Spotify is not the only online music streaming application that has a "year-end-wrap" feature, Apple Music has one too! But the biggest difference between both Spotify and Apple Music's this feature is that Apple Music has this year-round availability. Apple Music Replay and Spotify wrap both serve the same purpose, to highlight the songs that you have been enjoying throughout the year but Apple Music Replay allows the subscribers to keep track of their top songs and artists throughout the year.

With the new year, Apple has made it available for its subscribers to view their top streams. When Spotify makes it available for its users to see their wrapped tracks and lists every December, this feature of Apple serves throughout the year. Now Apple Music Replay will update the users every Sunday with the newest orders of their favorites.

By the time December comes and it is time for Spotify wrapped, Apple Music users will have a playlist of 100 of their favorite songs that they have preferred over other tracks for the entire year. Although according to the users and market, this feature will not show everything in as depth as Spotify and its wrapped feature, Apple Music Replay does have some interesting statistics and personalized playlists.

Apple Music users can access the Apple Music Replay playlist for 2023, starting from today on their phones via the Apple Music application. Towards the very bottom, the users will find the "Listen Now" tab where the playlist will be located. If you are a loyal subscriber of Apple Music and you have had an account since 2015, then this is the place where you can also find the yearly playlists starting from way back, in 2015.

But if you still think this is not enough to give social competition to Spotify wrapped, then Apple Music has something else in store for you.

At the end of every year, the Apple Music Replay will give your insight into a more in-depth recap. This will include some interesting additional details on who your top artists are and what albums you preferred the most along with the total listening time on the application. All these additional details will be available on the Apple Music Replay website so if you want to see just the top songs of the year, then the application will give you updates every Sunday. But if you want to see details like top albums, top artists, etc. you can see them on the Apple Music Replay website.
