BEBE REXHA DROPS 'DIRTY BLONDE' AS A FULL VISUAL ALBUM EXPERIENCE

Bebe Rexha has officially stepped into a new era. On February 11, the singer-songwriter announced her upcoming project titled 'Dirty Blonde: The Visual Album'. She shared the news through a short 13-second teaser across her social platforms.

The clip was simple and stripped back, captioned only with the project's name, but it carried a clear message. This next release will be a full visual album. With every track paired to its own music video, creating one connected story across sound and visuals.

While no release date has been confirmed yet, 'Dirty Blonde' already feels less like a traditional album rollout and more like a creative statement. The format alone suggests a shift in how Rexha wants her music experienced, leaning deeper into storytelling and imagery rather than isolated singles.

For now, the project exists as both a title and a concept. More details are expected to arrive in the coming weeks as anticipation builds.

Bebe Rexha also revealed the entire track list within the teaser. It includes -

- 'ÇikeÇike'
- '$hit'
- 'Tokyo'
- 'Hysteria'
- 'New Religion'
- 'Time'
- 'I Like You Better Than Me'
- 'Nobody's There'
- 'The Way I Want You'

- 'Drink and a Little Love'
- 'Nightfalls'
- 'One Day'
- 'Sad Girls'

The announcement follows Rexha's 2023 studio album Bebe, which marked the final release under her contract with Warner Records. That album leaned into dance pop, disco, Eurodance, funk, and rock influences, drawing inspiration from the sound and style of the 1970s and 1980s.

It featured production from Jussifer, Joe Janiak, and IdoZmishlany, and included singles like 'Heart Wants What It Wants', 'Call on Me', and 'Satellite' featuring Snoop Dogg.

The project also housed the global smash 'I'm Good Blue' with David Guetta, which helped introduce her music to an even wider audience.

Critically, Bebe was praised for its vocal performances and genre range, even if its commercial showing was more modest. The album peaked at No. 132 on the Billboard 200.

Still, the project was like a reflection of Rexha's versatility and her comfort moving between pop styles without losing her identity. It also closed out a major chapter in her career, one defined by big label releases and chart-driven rollouts.

Since then, Rexha has been moving toward a more independent creative path, and 'Dirty Blonde' appears to be shaped by that freedom.

The choice to release a visual album points toward a more hands-on approach, where music, visuals, and narrative work together instead of living in separate spaces.

It suggests something more personal and less constrained by traditional industry structures. While much about 'Dirty Blonde' remains under wraps, the project already feels like a reset.

Not in the sense of starting over, but in the sense of refining who Rexha is as an artist and how she wants her work to be experienced.

If the teaser is any indication, this next chapter will be bold, cohesive, creative, and driven by vision rather than formulas.

She is quickly setting the stage for what could be one of her most defining releases yet!

Top 10 Best Commercials for Super Bowl 2026

Top 10 Best Commercials for Super Bowl 2026

Super Bowl LX was one of the most entertaining nights for the American music and sports industry, where Levi's Stadium in Santa Clara became the greatest venue of celebrations.

The night of the finale took place on Sunday in California, and it was the final match between the Seattle Seahawks and the New England Patriots. The Seahawks beat the Patriots and won the Vince Lombardi trophy this year. The Super Bowl Halftime Show was also quite captivating with the magical presence of Bad Bunny, who headlined it.

However, the grand blend of music and sports is not the only thing that allures the audiences, as a large number of people tune in to watch the NFL due to the quirky and captivating Super Bowl commercials that create an appeal by featuring popular music artists and acting professionals from the industry. With only a small window of a 30-second ad spot, the ad is small in length but big in budget; somewhere around $8 to $10 million for half a minute only. Super Bowl commercials are not just mere advertisements but also a great reflection of the global pop culture.

Let's find the top 10 commercials for Super Bowl 2026:

Top 10 Brands in the Super Bowl Commercials in 2026

10. Amazon Alexa+

The AI fear is real in 2026, when a lot of people are worried about the wide impact of AI and how it can take over everything. Amazon did a great job in making a Super Bowl ad that showcases the usefulness of AI like Alexa+, which can be part of daily life.

This commercial features actor Chris Hemsworth and his real-life wife, Elsa Pataky, and it seems like they are having a good time while poking fun at AI fear and how it is going to ruin lives. The commercial further proves that AI can make people smile even in the difficult moments of life.

9. Bud Light & Budweiser

Perhaps beer can make people better at storytelling along with a directorial approach, and that is what was proved by the latest Super Bowl commercials by Bud Light and Budweiser. The Bud Light features Post Malone, Peyton Manning, and Shane Gillis, who offered a fun and enjoyable visual representation. In the ad, Post Malone could be found sliding and screaming while chasing a beer keg during the wedding.

Budweiser, on the other hand, created an amazing story where a baby bird becomes friends with a horse, and it is not hilarious but rather motivating. It changes with a daring mid-leap shot of the horse while Lynyrd Skynyrd's "Free Bird" plays in the background. It seems like Redbull is not the only thing that gives you wings.

8. Uber Eats

When football turns into 'football', UberEats comes to play. In their Super Bowl 2026 commercial, audiences can see Matthew McConaughey teasing Bradley Cooper with a 'conspiracy theory' on how football is selling food. You can listen to Elvis Presley's "Suspicious Minds" in the background and can find Addison Rae sipping on Diet Pepsi.

Somewhere between music and food, people can also find Pork Chop Womack, Jerry Rice, Sourdough Sam, Sauce Gardner, and others who also participated in the fight for the food. It is a quirky and engaging commercial for sure!

7. Instacart

Sometimes cringe can be good when it is handled with creativity, and Instacart's commercial provides the perfect taste for it. They featured Benson Boone and Ben Stiller as a European sibling duo who were singing about bananas, along with dancing bananas and a carrot.

Boone does a great backflip and puts Stiller in a great competition. It cuts back to the legendary movie of 'Zoolander' where Stiller could be found trying some stunt and falling, and then he sings, "What a time to be alive." It is cringe, hilarious, and enjoyable.

6. T-Mobile

T-Mobile went for a grand arrangement by shooting the commercial in New York City's Times Square. It features Backstreet Boys, who have tried a new version of "I Want It That Way" at the mobile store full of fans, and among the fans, you can also find Druski and Pierson Fodé.

The craze and fan engagement for BSB is noticeable, but when they go out in the streets, MGK can be found wielding a guitar and showing his singing skills, but doing a verse of Backstreet Boys for the mother and daughter at the store. It is heartwarming indeed!

5. State Farm

State Farm Insurance made a witty approach as well with a commercial that is star-studded and soundtracked by Bon Jovi's Billboard Hot 100 topper. It included the comedy experts, namely the duo of Keegan-Michael Key and Danny McBride, who are trying to sell some suspicious Hailee Steinfeld on their services. It transitions to a KATSEYE dance routine, and audiences can find an actual cameo from Jon Bon Jovi himself. Well, the brand played it well!

4. Xfinity

Xfinity's Super Bowl commercial easily takes one of the top spots by recreating the blockbuster Jurassic Park, along with the stars, namely Samuel L. Jackson, Jeff Goldblum, Sam Neill, Laura Dern, as well as Richard Attenborough, who passed away in 2014. While a lot of people are raising questions against the ethical values of making this ad by using AI tools to de-age actors and cast dead actors, this is supposed to be an intelligent ad that showcases how Xfinity has saved Jurassic Park without falling into a pitfall. Perhaps, it is a good thing that AI and Dinosaurs are not ruling the world right now!

3. Rocket and Redfin

Well, not everyone is trying to evoke nostalgia, as brands like Rocket and Redfin tried to represent emotional value through their ad, considering the current political scenarios of America, where ICE is killing people in the streets. The commercial showcases two families of White and Latin origin, and they are neighbors as well.

An emotional turning point takes place when one family finds the lost dog of the other family and gives it back to them, embracing neighborhood and friendship. Audiences can also find a version of Fred Rogers' classic "Won't You Be My Neighbor?" sung by Gaga.

2. Dunkin'

Dunkin' has been loyal with their commercial approaches, and they have casting Ben Affleck for consecutive years. They have brilliantly re-imagined Good Will Hunting with witty writing that includes hokey catchphrases from the popular '90s sitcoms.

The ad also includes cameos from the actors and actresses like Jennifer Aniston and Matt LeBlanc from 'Friends', Jason Alexander from 'Seinfeld', Jaleel White and Alfonso Ribeiro from 'Family Matters', Jasmine Guy from 'A Different World', Ted Danson from 'Cheers', Tom Brady, and the list goes on. It offers a gut-punch of nostalgia for sure.

1. Pringles

Well, when it comes to the top ads for this year, nothing can beat the charisma of Pringles, where they cast Sabrina Carpenter along with a guy-like structure made from chips. How about being with a man who is completely made from Pringles? Sabrina seems to be happy not chasing the man from Saltburn since she can have salty chips.

This creates a storybook romance where the man does not speak and is always by the side. Therefore, it is clever, cheeky, and greatly engaging for all.

Soft and poetic, 'Nazm Nazm' is a song that is humanly personal from the very first line. It carries an intimacy that draws you in without trying too hard. The melody flows gently, almost like a shared secret. Listening to the song feels like a late-night conversation between two people in love, where every word matters and every pause says even more than the lyrics.

New songs that deserve a space in your playlist:

'Dhun' from Saiyaara

"Tere is dilko churane keliye
Hai yahi ek dhun"

'Tainu Khabar Nahi' from Munjya

"Tere naal tere naal preeta laiyan
Ve maahi tain khabar nahi"

It carries longing in the sweetest way, almost like a secret crush you are not ready to confess. The melody feels tender yet hopeful. If you have ever loved quietly from a distance, this one will feel a little too real.

'Heeriye' by Jasleen Royal

"Teri hoke maraan
Jindjaankaraan
heeriyeheriyehaaa"

The melody drifts gently, and the emotions are showcased most sweetly. It is the kind of track you play late at night when the world slows down. Perfect for Valentine vibes that feel cozy and a little dreamy.

"Gehra hua, gehra hua Rang aashiqi gehra hua"

It has a quiet depth that makes you pause and think about everything you feel but rarely say out loud. The melody lingers tenderly, almost like a memory replaying in your mind. When you want to sit with your thoughts and let your heart speak softly, this song feels like the perfect companion.

Can Jungkook's OMAD Diet Be Followed by His ARMY from Kolkata?

The Korean pop culture has made a global impact, and with each passing day, it is increasing even more. From music, lifestyle, fashion, to even food, Korean culture has had a great influence. As of now, it can be said that there is no sign that the craze will reduce in any way. However, people are now exploring more about this specific culture. It has been seen that people are trying to learn more about Korean health and wellness.

Right now, everyone from all around the globe is more obsessed with this specific culture because renowned pop bands like Blackpink, BTS, Stray Kids, EXO, and Twice are doing live streams. In the live streams, they are talking about what they are doing in a day. And the fans are trying to follow them just like their idols do. All the Korean pop artists have a distinct fashion style. That is why their fans are taking fashion inspiration from them as well. However, now it is coming to see that everyone is paying more attention to their idols' diet plans too, just to achieve 'that perfect physique'.

It can be said that the Korean pop culture has gotten into every industry and is making a huge impact. Recently, through an interview, it came to know that the BTS singer, Jungkook, follows a strict One Meal A Day (OMAD) diet plan. He is now on a strict diet plan for his upcoming projects.

As people have come to know about such a diet plan, it is coming to see that everyone is quite curious. Whenever this kind of celebrity diet plan comes out, it creates a sensation on the internet. Along with the fans from all around the world, people from Kolkata have also become quite intrigued about this concept.

OMAD is quite a popular diet plan among all celebrities. And it is possible for them because they have access to the best nutritionists and medical team, who make it possible for them.

In this kind of situation, the problem is that the celebrities have access to the best medical teams. But when their fans find such concepts interesting, they do not have the privilege to reach out to the best supervisors in the market. Thus, it ends up as uncertified content online that misleads the easily manipulable young audiences. They just fall for such things because their idol is also doing the same thing. If you are an ARMY from India, especially Kolkata, and found OMAD an interesting concept, then you must learn this -

Is the OMAD diet safe to follow?

It has been seen that Kolkata has a large number of BTS followers. So, it is quite obvious that the latest discovery of Jungkook's diet plan has created a buzz among everyone in this specific city as well. However, a lot of question arises at the same time, which cannot be neglected. It is important to understand whether this OMAD is safe to follow without any supervision.

That is why an expert dietician, Srinwanti Dutta, has stated, 'Jungkook has an exclusively personal medical team, consisting of doctors, dietitians, and other specialists. They continuously monitor all the parameters of his body. He can easily afford it due to his immense wealth. That's not possible for an ordinary citizen in India’.

On the other hand, Ipshita Chakraborty, another professional from the same field, stated, ‘Children or adolescents are still in a growing phase, so their nutritional requirement is entirely different from those of a mature adult. They have to concentrate on studying, so for that, their nutrition matters a lot. You cannot follow influencers on the internet, who mostly share grossly non-science based advice’

According to the experts, nutritionists, it is understood that OMAD is only possible under great supervision for adults. It is an absolute no for adolescents because they require a lot of nutrition for their growth. So, from this age group, who are thinking about following their favorite oppa’s diet plan, they should know that it is not appropriate in any way.

Is the OMAD diet plan possible through a Bengali meal?

The OMAD diet plan is quite hard when it comes to getting all the essential nutrients. When people are not eating for a long time, a lot of problems can occur. The most common side effects are hormonal imbalance, frequent dizziness, hypoglycemic shock, and even fertility issues. So, it is definitely not advised for regular people. Srinwanti Dutta has said ‘During the first 24 hours of fasting, the body uses up its stored glycogen to maintain blood sugar levels. As fasting continues, the body is forced to draw energy from muscle protein and fat, increasing fat breakdown and glucose production from non-carbohydrate sources’.

She has even added ‘With prolonged fasting, the body enters a state of ketogenesis, where ketone bodies become the primary source of energy. Excessive ketone production over long periods can lead to dizziness, hypoglycaemia, confusion, hormonal imbalance and, in severe cases, ketoacidosis, which can be life-threatening. Such extreme diets can also disrupt menstrual cycles and fertility in women’.

However, when it comes to a Bengali meal, even then, getting all the nutrients through only one meal in a day is nearly impossible. Ipshita Chakraborty has mentioned, ‘For someone who exercises regularly, it is extremely difficult to meet the body’s daily nutritional and protein requirements in just one meal, even if it includes fish, chicken, dal or curd, as in a typical Bengali diet. One-meal plans often fail to provide adequate micronutrients and trace elements, increasing the risk of deficiencies, hair fall and loss of skin elasticity. Nutrition directly affects overall health and appearance’.

Therefore, it is better to avoid such a dangerous diet plan just because your favorite idol follows it.

What are the alternatives of OMAD plan?

Instead of OMAD, there are variant diet plans, which can be suitable for most people. There is intermittent fasting, which is much safer compared to this. It helps to get that desired physique in lesser risk. So, opting for this can be much more helpful for the masses.

Ipshita Chakraborty has stated, ‘If they want to lose weight, or if they want to do something, they can try intermittent fasting, but intermittent fasting also must not be internet driven; it has to be under the supervision of a proper dietician, who can guide what needs to be taken, when to be taken, what needs to be avoided’.

On the other hand, Srinwanti Dutta has said ‘A healthy meal plan includes carbs, protein, fat, vitamins, and minerals. Swap refined cereals for whole grains and millets to manage weight and blood sugar. Load up on fibre-rich foods like salads, veggies, and fruits to prevent overeating and get antioxidants. Eat small, frequent meals and exercise daily to maintain an ideal weight’. Even when you are following any specific diet plan, it is important to find a healthy option. The first priority for everyone should be their health. If you are not getting sufficient nutrition, then after a long time, it can cause more problems.

Thus, falling for concepts like OMAD is not advised for anyone without expert supervision.

Charlie Puth Did the National Anthem Performance at Super Bowl 2026

Charlie Puth performed at the 2026 Super Bowl on 8th February, and the NFL said he should be a bigger artist. He was seen performing the national anthem at Levi's Stadium in Santa Clara, Calif. On that day, the Seattle Seahawks and New England Patriots played against each other. And it was quite an anticipated match.

At the Super Bowl, Charlie was seen in a brown leather jacket as he came forward and stood in front of the keyboard to give his performance. After that, he launched his special arrangement, 'The Star-Spangled Banner'.

It was quite a spectacular moment when he came for the performance. The camera also showed all the players from both side watched him perform on the stage right before the match started. It can be said that the singer started the year with a great and prestigious note. It also came to see that for the opening festival, Coco Jones and Brandi Carlie joined him to sing 'America the Beautiful'.

It was quite an astonishing view for all the onlookers. It can be said that 2026 is truly special for Charlie Puth. Recently, it came to know that he is hitting another milestone this year as he and his wife, Brooke Sansone is about to welcome their very first baby. They announced their pregnancy in October, and since then, it created a buzz among all his fans.

Charlie Puth has been showcasing his talent as a music creator through all his songs. He has not only amused listeners with his soundtracks but also contributed as a songwriter to others' music creation as well. Taylor Swift even gave him a shoutout on her album, named 'Tortured Poets'. Along with that, he has been praised for his Grammy nominations, too.

However, when his name was announced as the national anthem performer for the Super Bowl, many sports fans were a little sceptical. Many didn't expect him to perform at such a place other than in concerts. One of the social media users also stated 'Man we've fallen from when Whitney Houston sang at the Super Bowl. Charlie Puth? He's not gonna give us vocals I'm afraid'.

For such comments on social media, Puth even said, 'I'll never claim to be as good of a singer as Whitney Houston ever was. But I assure you we're putting a really special arrangement together—in D major. It'll be one of my best vocal performances'.

He too was a little afraid about the performance and wanted to hit all the right notes, as it is like a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. Puth even shared a promo video where he said, 'Did you know that one of the most beautiful pieces of music also happens to be one of the hardest to sing?' He even added 'Ah, yes 'The Star-Spangled Banner' is a piece of music that has extreme vocal range'.

He continued by saying, 'Most hard-to-sing songs span just one octave range, like a low D to a high D. But 'The Star-Spangled Banner' goes from a low D to a high D plus five more notes, all the way up to a very high A'. The performance finally took place on 8th February, and it can definitely be said that Puth did really well and he once again proved what a phenomenal artist he is.

Britney Spears Sold the Rights to Music Catalog

A huge sensation has taken place in the music industry as Britney Spears sold rights to her music catalog. This news has been announced by TMZ, and since then, a buzz has been on the internet. As of now, it is not known the sale of her music rights and for how much it was sold. Britney and the music publishing company, Primary Wave, have come together for this deal.

Previously, it has been seen that it was Primary Wave who has been working for two decades for music rights. They have worked with musicians like Smokey Robinson, Bob Marley, James Brown, Whitney Houston, Stevie Nicks, and more. In the year 2020, Stevie sold her music rights to Primary Wave for a total of $100 million. Right now, it is coming to that Primary Wave has purchased the music rights of Britney Spears on 30th December.

Such deals are quite helpful for the artists, and currently, many artists are going for selling music rights. High-profile artists in today's time, like Shakira, Justin Bieber, Justin Timberlake, Bruce Springsteen, and many more, have sold their music rights. In 2021, Bruce Springsteen sold the music rights of his musical creations to Sony for $500 million.

In the whole career span, Britney Spears has released a total of nine studio albums. She made her debut in the year 1999. She has been one of the bestselling female music artists in the industry. It can be said that she has enhanced the pop music industry with her creations. She has continuously worked as a musician for nearly two decades. However, the personal struggle regarding publicizing the songs has always been there.

It also came to see that she has spent about 14 years under conservatorship, which required paying attorneys to fulfill the essentials and manage her life. In addition to that, it also disrupted her ability to make decisions regarding her career, personal affairs, and finances.

Later in 2021, the judge terminated the legal arrangement as well. After that, Britney recounted the conservatorship to shape his life. In 2023, she gave a memoir, named 'The Woman in Me'. She even said 'stripped me of my womanhood [and] made me into a child'.

However, finally, she has sold the rights to her music to Primary Wave. However, she didn't make any comment to the public regarding the music rights. Her fans are expecting that later she will make the announcement.

Previously, Britney once said that she had no plan to come to the music industry or perform in the United States. It can be said that if she plans to return to the industry, she will definitely make an announcement.

As of now, she has sold the rights and is not making any new music.

Cardi B Adds a Sultry Spin to 'Party in The U.S.A.' Lyrics by Miley Cyrus

Rapper, singer, and a mother, Cardi B changes the lyrics of 'Party in The U.S.A.' by Miley Cyrus into "It's a party in my py," and this twisted tour stunt delighted the fans. Cardi B's Little Miss Drama Tour is ongoing, and during a recent stop for the tour, the female rapper was found adding some twist to Miley Cyrus' song 'Party in The U.S.A.'. She changed that part to "It's a party in my py," and this sultry spin to the lyrics surely made the fans happy, as Cardi B is best known for being such an unserious and unhinged person. The moment was recorded, and it soon went viral with the help of the fans who posted and shared the clip on social media. In the video clip, Cardi B could be seen suspended high upon the stage while she is hanging, she sings "It's a party in my py" in a detuned voice, in front of thousands of attendees who came to enjoy her show. This is now an exciting pop phenomenon in the industry and on X as well.

The hanging stage prop seems like a giant ring with angel-like wings spread on both sides, where Cardi B sits in the middle. With an Angel or Cupid-like energy, she sings the line from Cyrus' song with a twist, and it was enough for the fans to cheer up with a fun moment. The arena was fully lit up with phone flashlights. The viral moment was spread like a bushfire, and fans have appreciated the broken sense of humor of the artist. They also claimed that if Miley were present at the event, she would have approved this energy from Cardi B.

Cardi B puts her own spin on Miley Cyrus' "Party In The U.S.A." during 'Little Miss Drama' show:

Cardi B is progressing on her Little Miss Drama Tour with multiple stops, and this is the first major arena tour by the rapper in the last 6 years. Her sophomore studio album, "Am I the Drama?" was released in 2025, and this arena tour is supporting the album and its success. During this tour, the artist has offered many headline-making moments that come as additional gain, other than her diversified setlist.

Her last performance of the tour took place at Climate Pledge Arena in Seattle on February 22nd, and it was absolutely perfect. Now, she is heading on to the Golden 1 Center in Sacramento for her next performance, which is all set to take place on February 25.

The North American leg of the tour will end in Atlanta on April 18.

Cardi B has a habit of cracking lame jokes and changing the lyrics of the popular tracks into something funny, sultry, and very Cardi-like.

Previously, she created a similar viral moment by twisting the lyrics of 'Last Christmas' by Wham! Repeating the same lame strategy on her tour and making it successful shows a vivid depiction of the modern music industry, culture, and fandom.

Ed Sheeran Performs at Sydney's Accor Stadium

Ed Sheeran's recent performance at Accor Stadium, Sydney, was like a pub gig blown up to 70,000 people.

It included raw charm and a giant screen fighting for attention. If anyone ever wondered what happened to all the buskers who once lined the pavement at Sydney's Circular Quay in the late '90s, there is a strong case that one of them evolved into Ed Sheeran.

Watching him command Accor Stadium on 13 February felt like witnessing that exact glow up in real time. One man, one guitar, and seventy thousand people. On paper, it still sounds unlikely!

The night began with noticeable gaps in the crowd as Vance Joy stepped out, suggesting most fans were in no rush to catch the early acts. Undeterred, he opened with Missing Piece before sliding into 'Mess Is Mine', instantly warming up the half-full stadium.

Dressed in a simple black button-up and jeans, he gave off strong Melbourne uni bar energy, like someone about to quote David Foster Wallace before picking up a guitar. Instead, he delivered a polished and heartfelt set backed by a tight seven-piece band complete with trumpet and saxophone.

'Fire And The Flood' soared, easily the standout of his performance and arguably one of the best moments of the entire evening. A lively cover of Kiss classic 'I Was Made For Loving You' added extra spark, complete with a wheelchair bound fan joyfully tearing it up near the front. Closing with 'Riptide', the 2013 triple j Hottest 100 winner, Vance Joy proved to be the perfect support act. Then came the main event.

Ed Sheeran is not the typical stadium superstar archetype. A short redheaded English bloke with no rockstar swagger and zero interest in flashy costumes, he somehow sells out arenas across the globe.

The stage design leaned heavily into spectacle, with a modest half-moon platform dwarfed by a colossal HD screen and a smaller round stage in the center. A pre-show video showed a teenage Ed in his bedroom with a looper.

It reinforced the promise that every sound heard tonight would be built live on stage. Then he emerged on the central platform with 'You Need Me, I Don't Need

You', layering beats and riffs in real time. Seeing Sheeran rapping atop a glowing bridge in the center of a stadium was not on anyone's bingo card, yet here it was.

From there, the formula settled in. Stories from his early pub days blended into hits like 'Castle On The Hill', 'The A Team', 'Shivers', 'Give Me Love', and 'Shape Of You'. A medley featuring 'Love Yourself' and 'Little Things' reminded the crowd of his behind-the-scenes songwriting reach. There was a dip in energy during a stretch of fan-voted deep cuts, where casual listeners grew restless, and chatter echoed around the stands, giving the place an odd London pub feel. And then the realisation hit. The magic of Ed Sheeran lies in the fact that he still feels like that pub kid with a guitar. The plain t-shirt, that awkward charm with the earnest grin. It created an intimacy that clashes with the towering LED visuals and, at times, overwhelming production. When the spectacle quieted down for 'Thinking Out Loud' and 'Perfect', the stadium finally felt small in the best way. These moments showcased his gift plainly and powerfully!

Brandi Carlile Takes Over Audiences with First Arena Tour

Grammy-winning music artist, active activist, and LGBTQ icon Brandi Carlile stands strong on her mission to unite Americans through love and support, which was proven on Friday.

Activist, singer, and songwriter Brandi Carlile is one of the most talented music artists in the industry, who is loved but less celebrated. She finally offered her powerful live performance in Minneapolis on Friday Night. She gathered a huge round of applause with a sold-out performance at the Allstate Arena. The singer said, “Tomorrow we’ll play a show for the state of Minnesota and for everything they just did for the rest of this country.”

The artist has also said that her Saturday show in the Twin Cities will turn into an audio-visual event, which will help in advocating for Human Rights, and the Friday performance created the perfect warm-up for it.

The messages of protest were loud and clear throughout the area, and everyone was free to join the initiative. Her Looking Out Foundation has already gathered $25,000 in order to provide legal aid for the people who are impacted under the Trump administration and their brutal immigration campaigns with ICE, which includes beating and killing people. People in Minnesota are deeply affected, and known persons like Alex Pretti and Renee Good were fatally shot last month by Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE).

The artist has encouraged everyone to donate more to offer aid to the people who are in need. At the show, there are postcards of #Bramily (Brandi Family) that will be distributed by the artist on her next stop.

Brandi raised her voice and said, “The plight of displaced people, people who have left their homes in search of safety, of a better life, is the defining test of our humanity in this time and age,” and that showcases the unwavering mentality of the artist who is kind, believes in humanity and uses music as her greatest voice of protest.

A few days back, the artist offered a magnificent performance at the Super Bowl, and the relevance of “America the Beautiful” is being proved now. With the message of unity, the artist embarked on her first-ever Arena Tour, and it already seems successful with its noble cause.

The humor was on point for people who want value for money, as Brandi said in sass, “We have all these lights and fake fog and s---,” and here, we refer to all seven other additional music artists on stage other than Brandi.

The musical group includes Phil and Tim Hanseroth, better known as “the twins”, SistaStrings, the violinist and cellist duo, and others.

The musical performance was absolutely grand, and it had to be as Brandi is also one of the most talented and respected artists who won a total of 11 Grammys, 2 Emmys, and received a nomination at the Oscars.

She has also collaborated with Elton John and created her own music festival called Girls Just Wanna Weekend. Brandi is not just a music artist but an amazing persona who gives hope to her fans.

Her upcoming arena tour would be a memorable experience for all kinds of listeners.

BTS Set to Storm Netflix with Live Comeback Show

BTS is kicking off their long-awaited return in a way few saw coming. Instead of launching their comeback on tour, the group will take over living rooms around the world with a special live concert streaming exclusively on Netflix.

The event, titled BTS The Comeback Live | Arirang, lands on 21st March and marks their first full group performance since completing military service. The biggest boy band group in the world also has a new documentary set for release on the platform.

The concert will stream from Gwanghwamun in Seoul, just one day after the release of their new album Arirang, and begins at 7 a.m. Eastern. According to reports, this makes it the first live global broadcast event of its kind to stream worldwide from Korea.

The show is directed by Hamish Hamilton, with production credits including Hybe, Big Hit Music, Guy Carrington, Garrett English, and Kevin Hermanson. This signals a major-scale production designed to match the moment. Netflix will also premiere BTS The Return on 27th March, a documentary directed by Bao Nguyen that follows the group as they prepare for their reunion after years apart.

BTS officially stepped back in late 2021 to complete South Korea's mandatory military service, a pause that reshaped the group's timeline while allowing each member to explore solo work.

During that period, fans saw releases like J Hope's Jack in the Box, RM's Indigo, and Jimin's Face, projects that expanded their sound while keeping their presence alive across global charts.

Arirang marks BTS's first full-length album in six years and their fifth studio release overall.

The album drops on 20th March via Big Hit Entertainment and follows 2020's Be, a record that captured moments of isolation and uncertainty during the pandemic. This new era is going to be different.

It arrives with the weight of reunion and reflection, setting the stage for what the group has in store and is described as a fresh chapter rather than a simple return to form.

Once the album lands, BTS will head straight into a massive stadium tour that spans 79 shows across five continents. The tour kicks off in April in Goyang, South Korea, and runs well into 2027.

It is also going to be one of the longest and most ambitious touring plans in the group's history. Still, this Netflix concert feels like the true starting point, a controlled and global moment where fans everywhere get the same front row experience at the same time.

Rather than easing back into the spotlight, BTS is choosing something intimate with its fans yet massive at the same time. A livestreamed comeback with a new documentary and their first album as a group in years, arriving within days of each other!

This feels less like a rollout and more like a statement. BTS is back, and they are doing it on their terms!

Billie Eilish is Getting Evicted for Telling the Truth at the Grammy Awards

Popstar Billie Eilish is currently revolving at the center of everyone's attention with a growing controversy that began after her Grammy Speech.

The speech was politically inclined and a depiction of truth that needed to be told, considering the grand platform she could utilize. However, her daring speech after receiving the Grammy for Song of the Year sure made some people, especially the ICE supporters, angry.

Billie said, "There are no illegal people on stolen land," and this anti-ICE comment was applauded by all the fellow artists in the grand ceremony, as it is true, considering the great American history. However, the speech created a backlash online as expected, and she is now at the center of controversy for her own property.

According to the report by the law firm, Billie's mansion in Los Angeles sits on the ancestral land, which was previously owned by the indigenous people of the Tongva tribe. The mansion costs around 3 million USD, but that is not the point here in a city like Los Angeles, where many other celebrities have mansions that can cost even more. However, the LA law firm decided that only her property belongs to the stolen land and thus served an eviction notice to the artist.

The LA-based law firm also issued a statement that reads, "Sinai Law Firm is offering to evict Billie Eilish from her Los Angeles home on a pro bono basis on behalf of the Tongva Tribe. Sinai Law Firm is the premier eviction firm in the county".

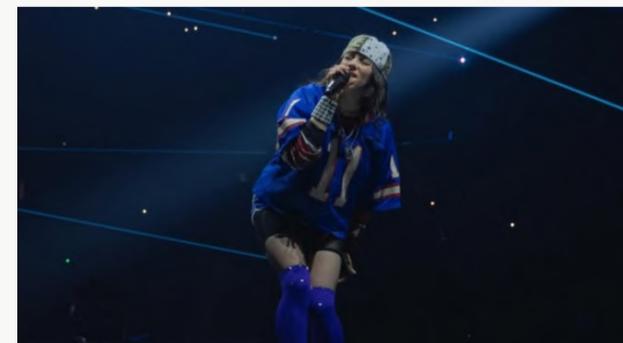

Since Billie explained a part of American history, the firm believes that "Eilish's admission that she lives on stolen land gives the tribe a rightful action for possession as the true owner of the property. The 30-day notice is already written and ready to be served."

Now, the most entertaining fact is that this firm that works with the law claimed that the statement was made as a joke! Yes, this matter appears to be a joke to law firms in America, and they said,

"Incredibly concerning to me that people in media are reaching to me as if this is a serious post." While Billie is stating American history, people are willing to utilize it as a controversy since the net worth of this successful singer is around $50 million.

In Billie's song 'everything i wanted', she said her brother will be there no matter what, and Finneas has proved that by defending her in the best way.

He replied to the haters, "You can't say it doesn't matter what musicians or celebrities say or think but then talk about it for days. You're out here making it matter. I'll keep speaking up especially if it keep speaking up especially if it keeps bothering you."

Pitbull Eyes World Record with Massive Bald Cap Crowd

Pitbull is setting his sights on a different kind of milestone, and this one involves fans, costumes, and a whole lot of shiny heads. The chart-topping performer, now 45, revealed on Tuesday, Feb. 17, that he wants to break a Guinness World Records title for the largest gathering of people wearing bald caps. He is planning to turn his upcoming show into what could become a history-making spectacle.

The big plan centers on his July 10 headline performance at BST Hyde Park in London, where he is urging concertgoers to fully commit to the look that has become part of his global image. He shared the idea in an Instagram post that instantly caught attention online, rallying fans to show up in costume and join the attempt. "Every time you put on that bald cap... you know you're about to have the TIME OF YOUR LIVES! Daleee," he captioned the post. The venue quickly joined the excitement, posting its own graphic to confirm that the gathering would serve as an official world record attempt. "It's official. Let's make history," the caption read, signaling that organizers are ready to turn a concert crowd into a record-breaking crowd. The concept fits perfectly with the artist's reputation for high-energy shows where audience participation is part of the experience rather than an afterthought.

In a statement obtained by Rolling Stone, the hitmaker shared how much the fan support means to him and why the idea feels personal. "Let me tell you how I feel about all the bald-e's that's gonna be putting it down. I just wanna let y'all know that every time you put on that bald cap, you know you're about to have the time of your lives." He continued, "I appreciate the love, I appreciate the commitment, I appreciate the support and more than anything, I just want to say thank you."

A post shared by BST HThe inspiration for the stunt comes from a viral trend that has followed him from city to city, as fans regularly show up dressed as him. The signature look usually includes a goatee, sunglasses, a crisp white button-down shirt, and, of course, a bald cap. During an earlier conversation with the BBC, he reflected on the phenomenon and what it feels like from the stage. "Every time I'm at a show, I let them know that when you put on a bald cap, I hope you're ready to have the time of your lives - it feels deeper than just music," he said. He added, "It's the ultimate trophy to be able to go on stage and see all the hard work that you put into the music. I've been in the game for 25 years, and to see every demographic, everybody [dressing up] at the shows is priceless."

The London show will also feature a special guest appearance from Kesha, who previously teamed up with him on the smash hit 'Timber'. With fan favorite tracks like 'Give Me Everything' and 'Fireball' already known for igniting crowds, expectations are high that the night will feel more like a celebration than a standard tour stop. More supporting acts are expected to be announced, adding to the anticipation building around the event. Beyond London, Pitbull is also preparing to hit the road for his upcoming tour with Lil Jon, which launched on May 14 and runs through September. Still, if the bald cap challenge succeeds, that July night may stand out as the moment his fans helped turn a concert into a headline-grabbing world record!

Taylor Swift Shared the Backstory of Her Latest Music Video 'Opalite'

Taylor Swift came up with her latest music video, named 'Opalite', and gave a backstory of its making. It has generated a sensation among all her fans.

The global pop star, Taylor Swift, has shared the music video of 'Opalite' on 6 th February, and people can't stop gushing over it. This song is from her album 'The Life of a Showgirl', which was released in 2025. Right now, for this song, she has come up with a star-studded 90s themed music video, which is amusing all audiences. In this music video, she has also tried a brunette look for the first time, which has amused everyone. Within just a brief time, this video has reached out to a large number of audiences and created a sensation on the internet.

Right after releasing the video, the artist of the track, Taylor Swift, made an Instagram post and gave a sweet, short backstory of making the video. In addition to that, when she appeared on The Graham Norton Show in 2025, she got all the co-guests from the evening to feature in the music video of 'Opalite'. It is her innovative manner that has made the song even more mesmerizing. This video is the second one from the album, and it can definitely be said that the video has made a massive impact on all of her fans. Within a short time, it has become a sensation on the internet.

The backstory of the video is quite interesting. The 36-year old pop star said on Instagram that she got the idea of making the video when she attended the popular British talk show. At that show, there were a few other guests. And one of them was the renowned Irish actor, Domhnall Gleeson. It was he who jokingly said that he wanted to be a part of a Taylor Swift video. From this particular statement, she got the idea of making the video.

While sharing the picture from the video, she stated 'My favorite part about writing is that first spark of an idea. It can happen at any time, for any reason. The idea for the Opalite music video crash landed into my imagination when I was doing promo for The Life of a Showgirl. I was a guest on one of my favorite shows, @TheGrahamNortonShowOfficial'. After saying that, she introduced the host of the show and said she 'got ridiculously lucky' as other guests like Greta Lee, Cillian Murphy, Lewis Capaldi, and Jodie Turner Smith joined her.

She even said, 'When we were all talking during the broadcast, Domhnall made a light hearted joke about wanting to be in one of my music videos. He's Irish! He was joking! Except that in that moment during the interview, I was instantly struck with an idea. And so a week later he received an email script I'd written for the Opalite video, where he was playing the starring role'. At the end, she said, 'I had this thought that it would be wild if all of our fellow guests on the Graham Norton show that night, including Graham himself, could be a part of it too. Like a school group project but for adults and it isn't mandatory. To my delight, everyone from the show made the effort to time travel back to the 90's with us and help with this video'.

John Mayer Makes His India Debut with a Special Performance and Shows Love for Indian Men

The modern legend of Blues, John Mayer, is loved by global music lovers, and Indians are among the top of them.

The Seven-time Grammy Award-winning artist has just performed at Mumbai's Mahalaxmi Race Course on Wednesday, and this marks the artist's debut in the country. The long-awaited performance in the country has finally come to an end.

Best known for his emotive musical compositions, John Mayer offers an emotionally enriched set at the show.

This debut concert in India has been initially scheduled for January 22, but it has been postponed due to "unforeseen circumstances". The humble artist addressed the delay and said, "Mumbai, it's good to see you! Thank you for waiting a couple of weeks longer, and thank you for making it, I love you." And that was enough to make the fans go crazy.

The most amusing part of the show was when John gave some heartily compliments to the men in Mumbai, and it was very cheering. He said, "You guys have fantastic haircuts and styles, the flow... I want to run my fingers through them. You are gorgeous. The men in Mumbai... Suddenly I feel like I don't have anything going on," and these jokes were enough for the banter.

The best part of the show is the opening acts, where Nagaland-based folk music artist Abdon Mech performed the tracks Aria and Taking My Heart.

There was also Tejas, an independent artist who performed Kiss From A Rose and Ruby. The selection of new and rising artists over popular brown faces shows how John caters to new artists.

His set list at the Mahalaxmi Race Course performance featured five of the most engaging songs, namely, 'Gravity', 'Slow Dancing in a Burning Room', 'Love On the Weekend', 'Waiting on the World to Change', and lastly, 'Neon'.

The artist entered the stage around 8:30 pm and took over it with his calm and poised aura, along with a charming musical presence. The artist is best known for his genre-blending flavors of rock, blues, and jazz with pop and RnB that sounds quite smooth and captivating.

His brilliance and warmth surely captured the hearts of the fans. John Mayer's soulful musical performance did not only include the common folk, as the fan base also includes a fair number of celebrities.

Some of them could be noticed at the event as well, including filmmakers Sidharth Roy Kapur, Sussanne Khan, and Krishna D.K, actor-singer Meiyang Chang, actress Anjali Anand, and many others.

John Mayer is one of those music artists who is capable of making his fans cry in love and heavy emotions through his songs, and that is what he proved again with his highly romantic tracks at the Mumbai concert that drew thousands of fans together.

The production process in this film has taken more time than it should have due to reshoots, delays, and several persistent questions. anticipation among everyone.

Jaafar is featured in this film, and he is making his debut with it. This film has the ambition of channeling the magic of Jackson and not to interrogate his life events.

That is why audiences are expecting that Jaafar has done justice to the project. A lot of discussions were going on regarding how the makers are going to address the pedophilia allegation that Jackson had during the 90s.

It is an event that even shaped his posthumous reputation. So, everyone is quite eager to see how they have portrayed every little detail of the dead artist.

As the film was taking more time to release, it came to light that they had to reshoot many scenes due to legal concerns. This has also created a sensation among everyone about what there might be, which raised legal concerns. However, all of them can only be known once the movie is released to everyone.

Before the making of this movie started, the makers had to take approval from Jackson's estate.

Regarding this, in 2023, the 'Leaving Netherland' director, Dan Reed, said that the movie is going to 'glorify a man who raped children' nothing that it is 'completely uncontested' that Jackson 'spent innumerable nights alone in bed with young boys'.

Later that year, in 2024, Reed even stated that in the movie, 'Jackson is only ever seen caring for children with childhood cancer, or dancing with a little girl in a wheelchair, or tucking up multiple little boys, mostly his nephews, at sleepovers'.

Now, nothing specific can be expected until the biopic releases in the theatres.

Indian music lovers are currently getting crazy over Danish Alfaaz and Bohemia's latest collaboration project, 'Main Tere Ishq Mein 2.0' featuring Isha Malviya on screen. The Valentine Month seeks fresh new romantic songs, and 'Main Tere Ishq Mein 2.0' fits that need.

Presented by Magnumarc Studios and Saregama, this song has just released and already created a massive buzz among the Indian fans. The track features Danish Alfaaz, rapper Bohemia, and the stunning presence and performance of Isha Malviya.

The song launched with an official music video, and it seems like the retro Hindi grooves are back. Buzzing on all the major music streaming platforms, this song is bringing back the taste of Indie pop music with a radio-friendly sound and melodic grooves. Music producer Bigg Sandhu has teamed with Danish Alfaaz for his dynamic skills of singing, composing, and songwriting.

Along with Bohemia's catchy rap verses, this song appears to be the anthem of the hour. There is no doubt that Danish Alfaaz has done an incredible job with his diversified skills, but it would have been incomplete without the screen presence of Isha Malviya. Isha could be seen performing along with the supporting dancers, and their intense dance moves were enough to make the project more tantalizing. Isha Malviya's bold moves and emotional eyes make it Bohemia also offered a different side of Hindi rap that listeners have been missing. The musical arrangement in the song is quite engaging, and its progressing cadence makes it more dance-worthy.

However, the lyrical approach in the song oozes a strong dose of romance that is infectious and tantalizing. Fury VFX deserves a special mention as this music video is comprised of some amazing VFX elements that make it grander, cinematic, and visually compelling.

'Main Tere Ishq Mein 2.0' is not only bringing back the taste of the past but also modernizing it with a blend of creativity. Whether it's a visual approach or audio composition, the song brings back the memories of the Indie pop music in the 90s and 2000s era, which has been lost from the industry for a long time. This single release, without any influence of Bollywood, is bringing back the old days through music. This dance track is also a romantic ballad that consists of a confident contemporary style. It is energetic and offers a fresh fusion of romance and rap, along with a catchy hook that is enjoyable for all kinds of listeners.

Danish Alfaaz is gaining new heights of success with this latest music project, which follows the release of his last hit project 'DIRHAM'. He has also released 'Jeene Ki Tamanna' before, and it seems like the artist knows how to make the cover tracks.

He has also released 'Koi Sheri Babu 2.0,' and each of the versions has gained much attention from the Indian fans. VISHAL MISHRA'S SONG 'KYA BATAUN TUJHE' MAKING FANS COMPARE HIM WITH ARIJIT SINGH

Indian music listeners started comparing Vishal Mishra with Arijit Singh after the release of his song 'Kya Bataun Tujhe' while the artist prepares to drop an exotic album.

Arijit Singh used to be the only one who could mend broken hearts with his melancholic voice after he retired from playback singing. Fans have been thinking who could fulfill the voice they need. Vishal Mishra's latest musical creation, 'Kya Bataun Tujhe', seems to be the answer to all of it, as this song has become the new sensation.

Deftly crafted and masterfully designed with a soulful voice and captivating musical arrangement, this song is the perfect emotional treat in this season of love. Mishra's emotionally drenched voice makes him one of the Kings of the Heart Break Club. After the release of the track on YouTube, the song garnered over 15 million views, and it is currently at #87 on the top trending video list.

'Kya Bataun Tujhe' also appears on the upcoming album by Vishal Mishra, which will be released soon this year. The album is titled "Pagalpan," and this project will also feature Simrat Kaur. The madness of music is on with this latest song that is tantalizing the hearts of the listeners. The "Kya Hua " singer has proven his worth in the industry with some of the best musical contributions, and this song is one of them. Vishal Mishra's Indian Idol audition is still one of the most viral videos among Indian music lovers, as this artist possesses a rich, emotive voice that soothes the hearts of listeners. After the release of this latest song, people are comparing him to Arijit Singh. However, Vishal Mishra stands out with his own sheer individuality, and his screen presence is also appealing.

'Kya Bataun Tujhe' was released with an official music video, which is presented by Gulshan Kumar & T-Series. Vishal offered lyrics, composition, and lyricism for the track, which showcases his versatility as a music artist. He has a spectacular voice that can ooze pain through singing. Master of his skills, the artist likes to take occasional pauses with soft progressions, which make it even more captivating. With a clock time of around four and a half minutes, the song leaves a deep and heavy impact.

'Kya Bataun Tujhe' also offers the perfect anticipation and teaser of the upcoming album project "Pagalpan," which is all set to release on Feb. 12, 2026, under the label of T-Series. This project is co-produced by Vaibhav Pani, and there will be a total of 16 fresh new tracks in the project. It took him more than 2 and a half years to create this album, and the dedication is visible.

Offering a hefty dose of romantic 'madness', before Valentine's Day seems to be the perfect time to release the project. While everyone might not have a partner on the day of romance, they can still listen to Vishal Mishra's latest album project.

In a recent interview with Rolling Stone India, the artist said, "This album is the most personal expression of my life, yet it speaks a language that belongs to every human being. It comes from a kind of chaos that is so universal it needed musicians, writers, engineers, and producers from across the world to exist honestly."

Also Vishal Mishra commented, "This is the first time I've opened my inner world to a truly multicultural expression," and listeners are eager to experience it.

BEBE REXHA'S 'DIRTY BLONDE' CUTS DEEP WITH THE SUPER DIRTY CUT

Talented music artist Bebe Rexha is going fully independent now. This new era starts with The Super Dirty Cut version of 'Dirty Blonde' that offers snippets of 13 tracks.

Popstar Bebe Rexha is reclaiming the pop industry with her brand new album project 'Dirty Blonde', and the artist has just dropped the title track of the album with The Super Dirty Cut. This cut is special not just for fans but also for the artist herself, as it offers an accumulation of snippets from all tracks in the album. This track is single yet not a single at the same time and offers the perfect tease to the upcoming album.

Yes, that is true! The Super Dirty Cut includes a fine blend of 20-second snippets of all 13 songs that will be appearing on the album. Each track consists of a pulsating EDM essence that is both captivating and enjoyable at the same time. With seamless transitions and a tantalizing creative flow, the dirty showcases a new chapter of Bebe Rexha and her musical expressions.

Talking about this special cut for 'Dirty Blonde', Rexha said that it was made to "cater to how fans consider music today." According to the artist, this will allow them to opt for their favorite tracks ahead of the release, and they can pick which song to roll out with. However, it can also be considered as a clever teaser angle where only one single release provides the taste of the entire album. She further added, "I just wanted to give every song its chance," and also said, "I worked so hard on this album. It's been three years now, and every song is so important to me. They're like your babies, you know? I don't want to be conformed by a certain sound or certain boundaries."

When it comes to the theme of the project, Rexha explained that she is embarking on this new chapter with more vulnerability rather than pleasing everyone. "I feel like a lot of people, they saw me through this lens of when I was trying to be, like, this perfect, clean-girl pop star," then she said, "When you're signed to a major, it's a little bit stressful, you know? 'Cause you're trying to always make everybody else happy."

A lot of the big songs that I had, too, were always in my computer I'd always written them and they were all basically 'No's' from whichever label I was at." Then she said, "Honestly, I haven't been able to show [this] side of me until now. Now I have a label, EMPIRE, that just is allowing me to be myself purely, and they celebrate that, and that's really cool."

The 'Dirty Blonde' is a reflection of Bebe Rexha's true self and an escape from "khia asylum". This album project is a celebration of the artist's prolific musical journey and an unwavering personality that is no more willing to compromise with the stereotypical norms of the pop industry.

She is now in full control of the situation, and there is no turning back now. Rexha is one of the most successful pop artists who has managed to get a total of 13 entries on the top chart for Hot 100, and many of them were part of the top 10.

Her collaborative project "Meant to Be" is one of the most successful releases made by the artist. The upcoming release 'Dirty Blonde' also marks the artist going fully independent with no record label managing her.

This self-empowering era of the artist is loved and supported by the fans, and they are eagerly waiting for the album now. It is all set to release this summer, on June 12. Stay tuned to find out more!

LANA DEL REY DROPS A NEW SINGLE AMIDST THE DELAY OF HER UPCOMING ALBUM RELEASE 'STOVE'

It seems that the long-anticipated studio album project by Lana Del Rey is finally releasing, and the artist has also confirmed the single, "White Feather Hawk Tail Deer Hunter".

Singer-songwriter Lana Del Rey has reigned in the pop alternative music industry for a long time now, and the LDR fans have been eagerly waiting for her next album release. Her much-awaited tenth studio album project 'Stove' was scheduled to be released before, but its release has been delayed several times now. The growing anticipation is slowly turning into frustration for the loyal fans, and Lana has realized that. She finally dropped a brand new single amidst the delay, titled "White Feather Hawk Tail Deer Hunter".

The announcement for the latest single surfaced through an Instagram story where Lana Del Rey decided to communicate with the fans directly and share updates on the progress of the new album and its release. In the video, the artist could be seen saying that "White Feather Hawk Tail Deer Hunter" is all set to release on 17 February 2026, and this post-Valentine phase can be a great time to listen to LDR songs for the broken hearts. This single is also appearing on her upcoming album and is capable of teasing the whole project as a lead single. Lana addressed the song as her "favourite track" from the album and also shared some genuine excitement regarding the release of the project.

Lana Del Rey said, "I'm really happy about it," and confirmed to her fans that there is nothing to worry about the process. Del Rey also revealed that she and her collaborators had "finally found that magical chord that I was missing". She also said that she is well aware of the delay of the release and she further assured that the release will take place 'soon'. In order to create this tantalizing music project, Lana teamed up with Drew Erickson, Dean Reid, and Laura Sisk, who helped in mixing and mastering, and turned it into a piece of art. Her long-time creative partner, Jack Antonoff, is also part of the track, and the artist created the music video with the help of her husband Jeremy Dufrene, sister Chuck Grant, and brother-in-law Jason Pickens. It seems like the artist kept it within a close circle only.

'White Feather Hawk Tail Deer Hunter' is all set to drop with an official music video, and it can set the right mood for the album while teasing it successfully. It is the third single from the project 'Stove', which will also include many other tracks. Previously, she dropped "Henry, Come On" and "Bluebird," which showcased a more country-esque taste through its musical and lyrical approach. Fans are now expecting a country-pop flavor in her upcoming album as well. 'Stove' is an unusually prolonged project which was previously teased in 2024 when Lana said that another album would be dropping soon, named 'Lasso', which follows the release of 'Did You Know That There's a Tunnel Under Ocean Blvd' in 2023.

However, the project got re-titled and 'Lasso' turned into 'The Right Person Will Stay', which was scheduled to drop in May 2025. But the artist said she wanted to make it more "autobiographical," and thus, she wanted to add additional tracks. 'Stove' has adapted the album, and it was set to be released early in 2026, but it is still taking much time due to logistical issues, and the artist has openly talked about this on Instagram. She explained, "Vinyl takes three months," and it is a valid explanation for the delay. LDR fans who have waited for so long can wait a bit longer for the grand release.
